HENRY PETERSON & Co., Publishers. No. 319 Walnut St., Philad'a.

PHILADELPHIA, SATURDAY, NOVEMBER 2, 1867.

ON THE DEATH OF BELLA Z. SPENCER.

FOR THE SATURDAY EVENING POST, BY FANNY SHEFFIELD.

Thy beautiful, brave life is ended, Thy noble heart shall throb no more, Thy hand hath done its last kind office, New memory must thy virtues store.

Many they were, thy name is precious, Like balm it falleth on the ear; The dying soldier blessed its music, And dying, deemed his loved ones near.

Thou stood'st in sorrow's awful presence All lovely as a white-robed saint; Never thy heart grew cold to anguish, Never thy steadfast soul grew faint.

Say, hast thou met in Heaven's fair mansio All who were comforted by thee ! Earth's weary children and grief-laden Whose tear-dimmed eyes no light could see.

With every loving art you guiled them, And they were cheered upon their way, Through thee they saw the light immortal, Waiting for them in one grand day.

Oh! dearest sister of my spirit,
Thy loss no time can lighter make; But I will mind thy high example, And do life's duties for thy sake.

So each heroic word and action Shall make us closer seem akin; And, darling, though afar I follow, Some of thy pure strength may I win.

Thus as a star, steadfast and shining. Thy lovely life shall point the way; And thy brave words shall be the motto That on my banner I display.

Oh! many a heart for thee is aching, From one the shadow ne'er shall lift; Oh! who could e'er forget thee, darling, So dowered with every precious gift.

Twere better to have loved and lost thee, Than ne'er such bright perfection met; he thought of thee, a planet holy, Within his heart's clear heaven is set.

Sweet spirit rest! in climes celestial. Thy glorious powers shall all expand; Nothing can limit there, or fetter, Where seraphs near the Godhead stand.

TWO COUNTRIES.

FOR THE SATURDAY EVENING POST. BY GEORGE JOHNSON.

Two countries are the Head and Heart .-

Two countries lying far apart. A cold and northern clime is one,

Of ceaseless toil; a land whose sun, Though bright as summer noon its rays,

Gives but the warmth of winter days.

Its air is chill with thought, and slow Its level, temperate waters flow. Warm gushing are the streams that part

That other country of the Heart.

And golden-blue the skies above-It is the native land of Love.

And though beneath its tender skies. The heated whirlwind often flies,

And passion's torrents fram and swell, Who in that country would not dwell?

CARLYON'S YEAR.

By the author of "Lost Sir Massingberd," &c.

CHAPTER XXVI

A NEW SISTER.

Agnes Crawford not only remained at the Priory to comfort the wretched mother all that day, but at Mrs. Newman's carnest entreaty, took up her abode there until after the funeral. Her unselfish goodness, evidenced by a thousand daily acts and words, worked its, way into Mrs. Newman's heart that good Mr. Carstairs does—"

"Well, so he does, my dear," interrupted her guest, laying her work down upon her worked its, way into Mrs. Newman's heart. treaty, took up her abode there until after the funeral. Her unselfish goodness, evidenced by a thousand daily acts and words, worked its, way into Mrs. Newman's heart, as the continuous falling of the pearl-like waterdrops will eat into the grimmest stone; and well for the widow that it was so. Certain sad truths respecting her dead boy-fiercely combated by her at first, but which, nercely combated by her at arst, but which, at last, she could not resist—were presently disclosed. Mrs. Newman had to confess to herself that her idol had not been all she had fondly supposed him to be. She was not less devoted to his memory upon that account—what mother could have been?—but the knowledge that her son had sinced the knowledge that her son had sinned, sowed in her this seed of good, that she grew to be less bitter against sinners. There he is a most inordinate eater."

must, she felt, be mercy for them such as she had not dreamt of, since it was needed she had not dreamt of, since it was needed for her dead boy.

Not a day now passed but Agnes came upfrom the Brae, and sat an hour or more in the bereaved woman's company. She never stayed to dinner, because she saw that her hostess did not wish that; for, as time grew on, the old habit of saving, of parsimony, not unobservable even during that interregnum of bereavement, resumed its sway over the forlorn widow. Sad as it was, Agnes smiled to see it, for it was a sign that although the heart-wound might not have been healed—and, indeed, could never deso—it was cicatrized. When the poor lady began once more to sniff at her cook, and bully her page, to count the cutlets that left began once more to sniff at her cook, and bully her page, to count the cutlets that left her table, and pursue the half-pence in her grocer's book with wrapt attention, it was as healthful a symptom as the return of mo-tion to the limbs of 'the paralytic. Yet, thanks to the influence of her new friend, she made some struggle against this infirmity of her nature. The first time she fall her. of her nature. The first time she felt her-self able to walk to church she dropped something more than small silver (of which she always had a great store) into the col-lection plate; it was not, indeed, a coin of the realm; but it was gold, and had been valued as such by her for many years, and kept in a locked drawer in her cabinet. Mr. Puce called the next day at the Priory with a po-lite speech about her baving made a mistake and given a much more rare and costly gift than a common sovereign; but she only said that she was glad such was the case, and bade him keep it for the good purpose for which it had been intended; it was only right that she should suffer for her carelessright that she should suffer for her careless-ness. So Mr. Puce had to give the poor a pound out of his own pocket, and add per contra to his collection of curiosities at the Rectory, a Spanish moidore of an inscrutable epoch, and with a large perforation in its middle.

Nay, though the widow's loss bore heavily upon her night and day, she absolutely made use of it to excuse little economies and re-trenchments; "now that her dear Jed had been taken from her," this and that were no to these proceedings (for any new act of thriftiness had always tended that way, as "a good stroke of business" molifies the city man) that her voice grew softer, her manners more gentle even than before; but corrections of this way doubtless owing to omething of this was doubtless owing to ignes. Mrs. Newman's household outgoings for the day having been reduced to a mini-mum, that lady would welcome the young girl to her breakfast parlor with the sweetest smile, apologizing for not taking her to the more ceremonious apartment upon the ground that the sun spoilt the carpet, for which reason the shutters were kept closed; or, quite as often, as time went on, the widow would walk down to the Brac, and spend "a nice long morning" with Agnes, which was always made to extend over the dinner hour. It fortunately happened that, although she had given orders for that meal to be prepared at her own house, it consisted of cold meat, which will be "just as good tomorrow, my dear, as to-day." This frequent hospitality, so cheerfully and ungrudgingly afforded, and the consequent disappearance of a few items from her own butcher's bill, completed her young hostess's conquest. An individual that is always glad to see and feed one, and who never looks for anything in return, is formed to be a miser's friend; nor was this unhappy woman's per-ceptions so dull but that she understood the motives which actuated her new ally. She knew that these were pity for her forlorn condition, and the pleasure of returning good for evil.

"It is very kind of you, Agnes Crawford," said she, as they sat together one afternoon in June in the little dining-room of the cotin June in the little dining-room of the cot-tage; for the drawing-room was avoided upon such occasions at the Erae, as it was at the Priory, although for far different rea-sons. Agnes would not compel her guest to look out upon those sands which had been her son's untimely grave. "It is very kind of you, dear, to let me drop in here, and eat you out of house and home in this manner.

lap, to allow of greater emphasis; "the last time he dined with me—that is, let me see, just nineteen months ago—he eat of every dish, and finished every one. I call it most ungentlemanly. And because there was no-thing in two of the silver dishes—put for ornament, my dear, of course—and because there were flowers in the champague glasses and no champagne—the idea of giving a vil-lage doctor champagne!—he was really quite rude."

"Mr. Carstairs is a very good, kind man," of landladies. of landladies."

"Ah, well, that is as it may be; everybody seems honest to you, dear. You judge people by yourself. And that brings me to the thing which I wanted to say to you.
Every day, when I go to my deak, this writing reproaches me—look at it. It is what I wanted you to sign with respect to Mr. Carlyon's will." Mr. Carlyon's will.

"Your brother's will," observed Agner quietly. His name had never been mentioned be tween them since the day of Jedediah's death.

Agnes had deemed it injudicious to press that he should be asked to his nephew's funeral; but she did not think it right to pass by his sister's mention of him by his sur-

"Yes, he is my brother, of course; although his conduct has not been brotherly— that is, in this matter," added she, hastily, in answer to the young girl's glauce. "I don't say that I did all I could to win him.

don't say that I did all I could to win him. But as to disinheriting my Jed, that was a shaneful thing, and—and—"

"Hush! my dear Mrs. Newman, hush!"

"You don't know what I was going to add," said Mrs. Newman, tremulously, "and yet—I was about to say—with respect to that will, now that I know you, I do not so much wonder at it. That is what I feel bound to confess. He loved you—how could he help it?—better than all elso, and he strove to show it. And I can't blame him—that is, not now." Here she paused, thinking he help it?—better than all elso, and he strove to show it. And I can't blame him— that is, not now." Here she paused, thinking of the "might have been," with all its ra-diant hues, extinct for ever, and the tears rolled down her thin but not uncomely cheeks. "You have not signed it, Agnes, have you, yet?"

'I will sign it, dear Mrs. Newman, gladly. "No, you have not, and you shall not. And what is more, if John, my brother, dies before me, I shall not take this money. He meant it for you, and you shall have it."

Agnes smiled sadly. "What is the use of money to me?" asked she.

"Of much use. Of use to everybody, my dear," answered Mrs. Newman, with vehemence: then added, tenderly, "take it; do good with it. Kiss me, Agnes."

She tore up the paper as she spoke, and rising, threw her arms about the young girl's neck. She had overcome, perhaps, the greatest temptation of her life; but the struggle had been severe and long, and she felt the effects of it.

"There, I have done it now," cried she, it and its least the leavest of the control of the control "and I feel all the happier. If you like to give me anything out of it, you know, my dear," added she, cheerfully, "why that is a different thing; you may let me have Wood-lees, my old home—for it is not sold, I hear to live in rent free. But I want ever thing to be yours to do just as you like with That's all.

"I hope none of it will ever be mine, Mrs. Newman. I trust Mr. Carlyon may be spared long years—and to God's glory—to possessit. His is a noble life, although it has erto been passed in darknes Agnes, and what Mr. Carstairs thinks about him? He heard from him only last week, and he was saying—"

"Oh, yes—yes—do not speak of it. At least, not in that way. I know all."

"You know his state of health, I suppose

"I am sorry to have distressed you, my The two women sat for some time in si lence. The hostess stitching at some baby clothes destined to cover some expected little stranger in the parish, for whom there was small welcome; the guest darning an old 'Agnes," said Mrs. Newman, presently, in a very gentle tone, "I have been a hard woman all my life—except to one who is gone-but I am not hard to you. I cannot bear to see those tears. What can I comfort you? Nothing? Yes, a comfort you? Nothing? Yes, a little, surely. When I pray to God to-night, I shall pray for somebody else. Not for you, for you do not need my prayers. Can you guess for whom?"

Mind, I do not mean in my old way, as you are thinking. I shall not thank heaven that I am not like him, unregenerate, wicked, predestined to eternal death; but as one w-sinner for another, as a sister for a

"I am, indeed, rejoiced to hear it: at the time, as a Christian woman, it is only same time, as a Christian woman, it is only your bounden duty."

"True, but one I have not performed for Years. And why shail I do so now, Agnes? Because I really love him? No. Because I honestly wish to be reconciled with him? No; I cannot even say that yet. Why shall I do it, then? Can you guess?"

"For God's sake, I hope, dear Mrs. Newman."

"And I say that you eat like a robin, and are, therefore, no judge," rejoined Agnes, smiling. "As for my expenses here, they are not much more than if I were a doll in a doll's house. Cubra, it seems to me, eats nothing but rice, so that I almost suspect her of being a ghoule; and Mrs. Marcon, I am sure, is the most honest and economical of haddedies."

To you meed not answer me, my dear; I know all about it. How very much you forget when you sought me out and brought ine comfort; how very much you forgave, which even if it had been committed against yourself only. There, lean upon me; I am your eldest sister now, since John Carlyon is my brother once again, and you my poor girl, love him. It is noor commy dear; I know all about it. How very much you forget when you sought me out and brought me comfort; how very much you forgave, which even if it had been committed against yourself only— There, lean upon me; I am your eldest sister now, since John Carlyon is my brother once again, and you, my poor girl, love him. It is poor confort that this can bring you, dear. A forlorn woman, vexed with petty cares, is a sad substitute for such a bridegroom; but it is something. The man that made the breach between us two shall henceforward be the link between us. I shall love you all the better and you will, at least, despise me less, Sister Agnes."

CHAPTER XXVII. THE MIDNIGHT VISITOR.

It was night, and Agnes sat alone in her little drawing-room at the Brae. Mrs. Newman had left her hours ago; not long indeed after she had expressed herself in such unoxpected terms, with regard to her brother and Agnes. The latter was genuinely glad and grateful that her guest had confessed herself so changed for the better; that her mind was so conciliated, and the bitterness of so many years against her now only relative had been cast out. But so far as Mrs. Newman's demonstrativeness affected Agnes herself, it was no subject for congratulation. She felt humiliated, nay almost ashamed. How had this woman guessed the secret which she had striven so hard to hide even from her own self? By what outward sign from her own self? By what outward sign had she shown that she loved John Carlyon when her own heart had been forbidden to whisper it? And yet how she did love him! How sweet it was to hear the poor folks talk of kindly Squire John! How welcome to her was the gratitude that prompted them to tell of his open-handed, generous ways; of his cool courage! With what pleasure she hearkened to their speculations regarding the next comer to Woodlees, always ending the text did with "Well be will set her she hearkened to their speculations regard-ing the next comer to Woodlees, always end-ing as they did, with, "Well he will not be a better gentleman than the young Squire, whoever he be." Better to them of course they meant: but was not that something? To have been good to the poor; to have been ready to risk his life for theirs; to have associated with them without one touch of

His lack of Religion, so far from deteriorating from such virtues, heightened them rather. If, not being a Christian man, he so behaved out of the mere excellence of his behaved out of the mere excellence of his own nature, how much the nobler was that nature. How she had treasured the few commonplace phrases of Mr. Carstairs respecting Carlyon's health, listening as though they had no particular attraction for her cars. The good doctor had spoken quite openly about his patient. He had no idea that this girl who, to his own knowledge, had rejected the young Squire, was anything more than "deeply interested," in her discarded suitor. The letters he now and then received from him were not of a private nature, and their contents were freely communicated to whomcontents were freely communicated to whomsoever they might concern. There was alsoever they might concern. There was al-ways respectful mention of herself and in-quiry concerning her well-being; for the rest, a little business and a good deal of gos-sip composed the whole of these communifor the

"He is no better, Miss Agnes," the doctor would observe in answer to her questions, "simply because it is impossible he should get better. You can't stop a hole in your heart as you would aleak. He doesn't men-tion his health, because he knows this as well as I do. He is leading a gay life, which is the very worst for a man in his situation to lead, and I am surprised that he has lasted so long. If I had known he was going to racket about in London, I would not have given him so long as a year to live; and I should not be the least surprised if my prephecy come true yet. The ides of Jane have come, but they have not yet gone.

To all this Agnes had listened with a grave but quiet face, and without revesting the torture of her heart. Successful in this, she had deemed concealment was easy under all had deemed concealment was early under all less crucial tests. And yet this woman—to whom she had never since their intimacy breathed Carlyon's name, in whose presence she had studiously avoided speaking of him, although from fear of such a consequence—had guessed the secret of her love. Agnes, though not insensible to Mrs. Newman's good intentions, was far from thanking her for this. Heaceforward them the sweet scheep of an alighted sorrow—for there are solace of an aushared sorrow—for there are sorrows as well as joys wherein no stranger may intermeddle, and with which even a friend's sympathy is intolerable—was to be denied her. How far too might not this discovery extend? Would vulgar eyes begin to watch her with unwelcome pity, vulgar tongues to utter words of thankless com-fort? It seemed hard that, though unre-pining, she should not be permitted to bear her cross alone; yet she was far from repi-ning eyen now.

ning even now.

God knew what was best for her as for an." everybody. Perhaps it was to show the in the flesh? What was this cold current "No: for your sake. And why do I say powerful temptation of worldly love that it sweeping over her, that made her shiver so, was decreed she should be held up as an example of a Christian woman whose heart was given to a godiess man: for it had been given, that was certain, and was John Carlyon's still. Her very being seemed to confess it when the life-blood rushed to her cheeks, as though in protest against such a reflection as she had just made.

Carlyon Godless? Impossible! God had suffered him to revolt for a while, but would presently becken to him with forgiving finger. That was all. Presently? It must be very soon them. It is impossible to describe in words the mental agony which that last thought engendered. We grieve, we weep, all hope and health seem to depart from us, because our loved one has died, and has left us for ever. That one dread sentence, "He is Dead!" seems to comprehend in it the death of all that makes our He enjoyable, nay bearable. But how much more terrible to the truly religious soul is the fear—nay the conviction—that our departed brother is not only Dead, but Lost.

The narrow-minded foolish folk who make up those spiritual cliques and coteries which do their very best to draw Religion into contempt, under pretence of fostering and protecting it, feel nothing of this. In their heart of hearts they either do not, for the most part, believe the fearful dogmas they enunciate, or they do not realize the effect of them. Otherwise, being men and not ficuds, the sense of the eternal condemnation of the majority of their friends and acquaintances (of which they affect to be convinced) would be ever prosent with them; it would take away their appetites (which it certainly would be ever present with them; it would take away their appetites (which it certainly does not), would destroy their sleep, would thrust itself between them and even the most innocent pleasure; they would never cease, like Solomon Eagle, from crying "Woe, woe!" As to the few who do realize "Woe, woe!" As to the few who do realize what must happen if their creed be true, and yet have learnt to regard it with calmness if not satisfaction; the human wheat who are not disturbed by the doom of the tares growing up around them; who say quietly, "They will burn but we shall be in the garner"—let them beware, lest instead of being the Elect, their cruel feet are set on the very road to Perdition. Very literally they apply road to Perdition. Very literally they apply the homely saw,

Of all our mother's children we love our selves the best, As long as we're provided for, the Devil take the rest.

But it is doubtful if their selfish complacency will be rewarded exactly as they expect.

Agnes Crawford's religion was not of this sort. She believed and trembled, but it was for others, not for herself; and for the man she loved, above all. As in some frightful she loved, apove all. As in some frightful nightmare we sometimes see one very dear to us blindly walking towards the brink of a sheer precipice, yet cannot raise hand or voice to warn him, so Agues beheld the coming doom of John Carlyon. It was rarely out of her thoughts, and shadowed them, even when unrecognizable there, with habiteven when unrecognizable there, with habit-ual and deepening gloom. She was think-ing of it now, as she sat by the open window in the summer night, looking forth upon the fast filling bay. There was no moon, and the sky was islanded with many a cloud, but by the dim starlight she could see the sweep and swirl of every white-lipped wave, as it licked up the sands. What hope there was for any tide-caught traveller twixt where she sat and youder hidden shore, so little and no more was for John Carlyon little and no more was for John Carlyon dying in his stubborn pride. Upon one yet uncovered spot, not many yards from land, stood up some object bare and tall; the mast of a sching vessel, the hull of which was al-ready buried in the quicksand beneath; to ready buried in the quicksand beneath; to not less certain—perhaps to scarce less speedy doom—was John Carlyon doomed. Across the sea and through the misty veil that hung above it, flashed down on land and wave the revolving Pharos light; now hid now seen; it was placed there for man's guidance and salvation; but if one were so blind or willful as not to heed it, but steer ight to into the caping law of Death?

right on into the gaping jaws of Death?
All things she saw supplied the unhappy girl with images of her beloved one's ruin. The wave sighed at her feet, the night wind wailed above her in unison with her own sad thoughts. Even now while she was thinking of him, praying for him, he might be dead

The chill of fear seized all her frame, re-laxed and enervated with sorrow, and froze it so that every limb grew rigid. She could not have stirred a finger to save her life. What was that voice, unlike to any that she knew, that had murmured her own name, close by her, in the very room? No thought of danger—of physical peril crossed her mind; she was terror-stricken with a nameless awe. Was it then true, as some good Christian folks had averred, that the spirits of the departed are sometimes permitted to return to earth and reveal their fearful doom to those they have left behind them? Was John Carlyon speaking to her, but not in the flesh? What was this cold current

In the air of the vault did where they had laid her father months ago?

She knew the speaker now; yet her terror did not alsate, but was exchanged for apprehensions of a different sort. The current where felt was the draught of air caused by the unheard opening of the door behind her. Her midnight visitor was one of flesh and blood; yet searcely to be drauded less than a spectre. How had he gained admittance a spectre. How had he gained admittance to the artingo without her knowledge. And how had he dated to present himself, unannounced, at such an hour?

The voice was Richard Crawford's voice, but with a difference. Eves when she recognition is the state of the voice was Richard Crawford's voice, but with a difference. Eves when she recognition is the voice was Richard Crawford's voice, but with a difference. Eves when she recognition is the voice was recognitional to the voice was Richard Crawford's voice, but with a difference. Eves when she recognition is the voice was recognitional to the voice was Richard Crawford's voice, but with a difference. Eves when she recognition is the voice was recognition of the voice was Richard Crawford's voice, but with a difference. Eves when she recognition and treates extravagantly, or flings devise some mansof preventing the nuisance. But even if he floes nothing except make a "tremendous fuss," a great deal of good will most likely easue from it; for there are some classes of people in this world who will most likely easue from it; for there are to voice. No man is good for him, or joine along the right to vote.

No man dresses extravagantly, or flings devise some mansof preventing the nuisance. But even if he floes nothing except make a "tremendous fuss," a great deal of good will most likely easue from it; for there are the right to vote.

No man dresses extravagantly, or flings devise some entance flows enter the floes but even if he floes nothing the voice.

No man dresses extravagantly, or flings devise some classes of people in this world will most likely easue fr but with a difference. Eves when she recognized it as her cousin's, she could not fail to mark that. Why did he stand yonder motionless—an undefined shadow—and not greet her, if self-conscious of no harm after with near, poid to her in her solitude, at midual to the studious respectful misu and word?

Can surver only could be given to such a construction, and her fluttering heart returned. Because he has the right to vote.

No man has to submit to laws which he thinks unfair and unjust. Because he has being an absence? What could this sudden the right to vote.

No man is just as much of a food now as twenty years ago. Because he has the right to vote.

No man has to submit to laws which he thinks unfair and unjust. Because he has the right to vote.

No man has to submit to laws which he thinks unfair and unjust. Because he has being it to vote.

No man has to submit to laws which he thinks unfair and unjust. Because he has the right to vote.

No man has to submit to laws which he thinks unfair and unjust. Because he has the right to vote.

No man has to submit to laws which he thinks unfair and unjust. Because he has the right to vote.

No man has to submit to laws which he thinks unfair and unjust. Because he has the right to vote.

No man has to submit to laws which he thinks unfair and unjust. Because he has the right to vote.

No man has to submit to laws which he thinks unfair and unjust. Because he has the right to vote.

No man has to submit to laws which he thinks unfair and unjust. Because he has the right to vote.

No man has to submit to laws which he thinks unfair and unjust. Because he has the right to vote. question, and her fluttering heart returned liceause he has the right to vote.
it, in many a hasty heat—"This man is In one word, men are exempt for mad!"

(TO BE CONTINUED.) poverty, weakness, pain, ignorance

PHILADELPHIA, SATURDAY, NOVE'R 2, 1-67. As we begun this a its close—Nonsense!

Notice - We do not return rejected manuscripts, unless they come from our regular correspondents. Any postage stamps sent for such return will be confiscated. We will not be responsible for the safe keeping or return of any manuscript.

NONNENNE.

Some one recently said of the New York Constitutional Convention, that its members were generally remarkable for their talents-

If they wanted was a little sense.

We know not how true this statement is. but we do know that there are a great many of just that kind of men and women about in these our days—writing editorials, trying to govern states, and making speeches and fools of themselves.

One of these talented gentlemen, for instance, will get something or another "on the brain"—and then let the world look out. He can see nothing but his particular hobby-all the good in the world comes from con-forming to that hobby, all the evil from not conforming to it.

conforming to it.

Recently a person somewhat of this stamp, a gushing gentleman of the name of Tiltover, in commenting upon the foolish extravagance of certain ladies, added, in substance, when we how can we wonder at this, when w deny them the right to vote? give them the suffrage, and things will be very different." We often of late see comments of this kind going the rounds of the press, and we propose to win the thanks of the "woman's rights' societies," by adding to the number of such effusions—trusting that all sympa-thizing editors who copy them, will give due credit to Tue Post.

Last Thursday morning, about ten e'clock, one of our most respectable ladies, walking along Archetreet, cought her crinoline on the scraper attached to a discrete. The consequence was she tripped, and was flang violently to the ground, injuring a little shild severely in her fail. How long will a demented community refuse the right of voting to our dates, in view of such tragical occurrences?

lon citizen, Dr. Biazes, was severely burned last Tuesday evening, owing to ber skirts catching fire from the low-down grate. This is another proof of the cyll that results from denying to woman ber is they all inited in lamentations upon the wretched character of their Irish and negroservant girls, whose Ignorance and want of cleanliness, they said, scarcel could be endured. "There is only one help for this, ladies," a distinguished lady orator (Miss P) at to vote, and they will at once become different beings. kind are made of By going out frequently to ward meetings, and mixing with the intelligent gentlemen who always frequent those assemblance, they will speedily be come intelligent and cleanly, and be able to cook and do general housework in the most efficient manner." The ladies were all struck damb by the weight and profundity of these remarks, but afterwards admitted that the only way to make Judy and Dinah good cooks, was to give them the right of sudinge.

lady whom she had not seen for many years. She tound her with two bables (twins) in her arms, with alx or seven other children the oldest not over twolve No wonder that this poer mother owned herself to be fatigued and care worn. "But what am I to day" said she. "The children must be cared for said it. seems next to impossible to get my one worth having to assist me." Our progressive friend at one laid before her the new avenue which was opening for woman. Showed her how all her heavy hurdens were to be lightened by giving her the right of voting and being voted for, with the inestimable privile tical questions. The poor, care worn mother of on and relief it would be, to leave the twins with each other, while she put on her best things and her bennet, and went off to discharge the duties of a free and independent electron. We may add that her sul scription to three of the leading publications devoted to the emancipation of woman, was paid down on the spot. Ab, who can sufficiently bless those prothe spot. Ah, who can sufficiently bless those pro-gressive spirits, who first conceved this wonderful means of alleviating all the pains and sufferings to thick the gentler sex is liable; "nor is he "thankful to have gressive spirits, who first conceved this wond-

But we must conclude. We can furnish another supply of the same sort, when these are exhausted by the advocates of female suffrage. That the suffrage will do all that we have said, and even more, to benefit wo-man, must be true, for we all know what a wonderful effect for good it has upon the

In one word, men are exempt from all the poverty, weakness, pain, ignorance, and suf-fering of this world, because they have the SATURDAL EVENING POST, right to vote, to be equally intelligent, happy,

As we begun this article, so we now say at

THE ITALIAN DIFFICULTY.

While we sympathize with the Italian people in their desire to unite Rome with the rest of the peninsula, we either do not understand the facts of the case, or else must consider Garibaldi and the "Party of Action" very greatly to blame in their recent

For what are the facts? If we correctly apprehend them, three years ago Rome and the Pope were under the protection of a French army. This was displeasing to the French army. This was displeasing to the Italians, and they therefore, through their government, which at that time was in high favor with them, made an agreement with France on the 15th of September, 1864, in he following terms .-

Article 1. Italy blods herself not to attack the actual territory of the Holy Father; and to prevent, even by force, every attack coming from the interior against the sald territory.

Article 2. France will withdraw her troops from the Pontifical states by degrees, and in proportion as the army of the Holy Father shall be organized. The vacuation shall nevertheless be complete within the period of two years.

Article 2. The Italian government will make no mpased even of foreign Catholic volunteers, sufficut to emintain the authority of the Holy Father, nd tranquility both in the interior and on the fronof the states provided that this force shall not some a means of attack against the Italian go Attitle 4. Italy declares herself ready to enter into an arrangement to charge he self with a propor-tionat part of the debt of the former states of the Church.

Article 5. The present convention shall be ratified, and the ratifications exchanged in the course of at from days, or sooner if possible,

Now it seems to us that the observance of solemn freaties, is just as much the duty of the Italians as of any other people. The Italian government, acting for the people of Italy, having pledged itself to defend Rome from the attacks of its own restless citizens, as a return for the withdrawal of the French troops, is bound in honor to fulfil its pledge; and the Italian people are equally bound in honor to support their government in doing

It seems to us that a nation that values Rome more than the observance of its solemn out stiending a ward or county meeting instead of being in her parior (where old forgies seem to think a lady should be of an evening) this shocking cates trophe would never have taken place.

Belges, will find it difficult to carry on long any kind of a government. And much as we admire the disinterested and gallant trophe would never have taken place. him as a suitable leader for the Italian people. We are afraid he is simply one of those faratical spirits, who, possessed by some one idea, is willing to sacrifice all other interests, and all other considerations, to attain his worshipped end. This is not the

> But perhaps the facts are different-per haps there is haps there is something we do not know that would qualify the binding obligation of the above treaty-if so we should like some of the to descend a little while their eulogistic stilts, and in plain and simple phrase acquaint us with it.

CONTENT VERSUS DISCONTENT.

The virtue and happiness arising from a contented mind has been the theme of poets and philosophers in all ages, and the contented man seems to have been always re garded as a person most worthy of imita-tion; but we have never heard a word said in favor of that most abused individual-the discontested man; surely the good cannot all be on one side, let us look into the question a little and sec to the first place the contented man is generally good-natured and smiling; he is satisfied with his lot in this world, and even if everything is not running on exactly to his way of thinking, he does not bother himself much about it. If the cars do rattle some and are badly ventilated, if the gas he burns is pour, and the water he drinks not first rate, he will most likely say, "What is the use of making a fuss, or trying to remody these trifles; we cannot expect to have everything just as we want it in this world; of course we must suffer some inconveniences; I am sure we are a great deal better off than our forefathers, and I think we ought to be thankful to have things as things as good as they are," but, on the con trary, if affairs get to be managed badly and he thinks there is room for improve ment, he will, very probably, "kick up a row" as the saying is, and if he belongs to the better class of discontented persons he will try to remedy the difficulty

If he should have any facult tion, he may, in some cases, as in that of an Suppose our forefathers had been satisfied thinks unfair and unjust. Because he has to have things as they were; satisfied to be the right to vote.

No man is just as much of a fool now as poorly lighted houses, and to suffer numer-he was twenty years ago. Because he has ous other discomforts; does any one think we should now be enjoying one many conveniences we do?

But happily there were then, as there are now, a class of persons who are very seldom satisfied with the state of affairs; who are continually finding room for improvement; and to this class most of the inventions in all times have been due.

Of course we do not wish to prove that all discontented men are useful, and that all contented ones are not; but merely to show that the good is not entirely on one side, and that the discontented man has his part to perform in the world, as well as his more

FINE WRITING .- The English newspaper correspondents quite equal some of our American ones in fine writing—what we call in this country "highfaluting"—as witness the following from an English periodical:—

"A pheasant—a goodly, and a beautiful sight it is to see the spangled exotic of our woods come crashing down into the hazels or the ferns, like the broken end of a rainbow or a piece of damaged jewelry, while the echo of the shot rings through the autumn

The man who did that, sent to a watering place, no doubt could do even better in de scribing the dresses and jewelry of the ladies.

NEW PUBLICATIONS.

A TALE OF TWO CITIES, By CHARLES DICKENS. People's Edition. With Illustrations by John McLenan. Published by T. B. Peterson & Bros., Philada. This edition of the "Tale of Two Cities" is the third volume of an entire new edition of Charles Dickens's new in course of publication by T. B. works, now in course of publication by T. B. Peterson & Brethers, which is called "The People's Edition, Illustrated." "Each volume white paper, from large, clear type, leaded, Long Primer in size, that all can read, uniform with the type in this volume, and be illustrated with twelve original illustrations, bound in cloth, and sold at $1.50 a volume. HAND-BOOK OF PRACTICAL COOKERY, for HAND-BOOK OF PRACTICAL COOKERY, for Ladies and Professional Cooks. Containing the Whole Science and Art of Preparing Food. By PIERRE BLOT, Prof. of Gastronomy, and Founder of the New York Cooking Academy. "If ye be willing and obedient, ye shall cat the good of the land." Published by D. Appleton & Co., New York; and also for sale by D. Ashmend, Chestnut street. Publishes.

MODERN PALMISTRY; OR, THE BOOK OF THE HAND. Chiefly According to the Systems of D'Arpentigny and Desbarrolles. With some Account of the Gipsies. By A R. CRAIG, M. A., author of "The Philosophy of Training," &c. With Illustrations. All of Training," &c. With Illustrations. All termined by the lines of the palm, should read this volume. Here we have it all laid down—the smoothness or crookedness of life, whether we shall be married, prosperous and wealthy, or the reverse. It is written on the palm, and one only needs to know how to interpret the oracles; which are apt to be sufficiently ambiguous to allow a pretty wide margin for guesswork. Published by the American News Company, New York; and also for sale by J. B. Lippincott & Co.,

NAPOLEON AND THE QUEEN OF PRUSSIA. An Historical Novel. By L. MUHLBACH, author of "Marie Antoinette," &c. Translated from the German by F. Jordan. IIlustrated. These novels by Mrs. Muhlbach are said to be very entertaining, but not very reliable so far as their historical accuracy is oncerned. Published by D. Appleton & o., New York; and also for sale by George

W. Pitcher, Philada LEYTON HALL. By MARK LEMON, author of "Loved at Last," &c., and editor of "The London Punch." Published by T. B. Peter-&c., and editor of "The on & Bros. Price 75 cents.

A NEW MAGAZINE. We understand that a new "first class magazine, devoted to Lite-rature, Science and Education," somewhat of the style of the "Atlantic Monthly be issued in January next by Messrs. Lippincott & Co., of this city. It w It will be styled "Lippincott's New Monthly Maga-

La A person was accused of "assault and battery" in the Quarter Sessions of this city recently. The accused had a mirror which being turned with the strong reflec-tion of the sun npon the face of a lady at some distance, who was looking out of a window, thereby caused her pain by the effect of the sun's rays upon her eyes. The ury found the defendant guilty. It is much to be regretted that the ocess of rendering the materials of ladies' muslin dresses uninflammable is not more generally understood and used. Either of three substances-phosphate of ammonia ate of soda, and sulphate of ammonia be mixed in the starch, and, at the cost of two cents a dress, deaths from burned garments can be rendered impossible. Ar-ticles of apparel subjected to those agents can, if they burn at all, only smoulder and in no case can they blaze up in the sud den and terrible manner in which so many fatal accidents have occurred to the fair *earers of crinoline.

12 A widow in Kentucky recently went to seek two of her children who had strayed away, and found them killed by a rattle snake. Returning, she found her remaining child drowned in a washtub.

The Universal Peace Society met reently at Boston. Most of the Universal Universal Peace men are in favor of the Military Re

OVER SEA.

IMPERIAL HOTEL, DUBLIN, &

My DEAR POST—It is the dreariest of days, and the heavens without are weeping in more than even their usual lachymose in more than even their usual lachrymose wont—so being deprived of my morning constitutional, I fly for relief to my pen and you. You know we sailed from New York, in the Persia, on the 18th of September. There were only thirty-two passengers (including nine in the second cabin,) among whom was a noted actress, the Leah of Gotham celebrity, who, however spicy she may be on the store of Lawrence testify. may be on the stage, as I myself can testify, is exceedingly poky upon deck. The officers of the Persia are exceedingly pleasant, gentlemanly and talkative, but the captain looks like a jolly masker, and the purser is per-petually "washing his hands with invisible soapin imperceptible water"—and another has about him a flavor of weak tea, or mild cheese, or anything else equally innocent and insipid. The weather during the first few days was levely—the sea, vast and vague, rose and fell in gentle undulations, and melted away against the horizon's verge. But on Monday noon there came up what the sailors called a "bit of a blow". ciently akin to a storm, however, for me to desire no further acquaintance with. The decks were drenched, and the vessel nitched decks were drenched, and the vessel pitched from side to side in a manner peculiarly ag-gravating. I lay in my berth the whole of one day, sublimely indifferent to mundane affairs, except when solicitous friends sent me hideous compounds, such as fried systers, chicken salad and the like, which set me to gasping perilously.

Home-sick and sea-sick there were few sweeter sights than the long, low line of hills that crown the coast of old Ireland, and a little later, to be "steady and still on the solid land," seemed very comforting. After going through a farce of having our trunks examined by plethoric, beef-eating, whiskey-drinking custom house officers, we landed at Queenstown about noon on Friday.

I thought at first I should laugh for a week, everything seemed so novel and anti-quated. The quay was lined with a motley oup of pompous police officers; old crones, the the cleanest of frilled caps and the raggedest of long cloaks, who held out a square yard or so of lace handkerchief, and patheti-cally begged you to "buy mum, for the love of heave", ways were seen as the of heaven"—young women, men and chil-dren, miserable, unwashed, unkempt. Then and there we were attacked by beggars, from which epidemic we have not yet recovered. Queenstown is beautifully situated on Cork Harbor. It is a city set on a hill, and the streets rise one above another, terrace upon terrace, with everywhere a broad outlook on the bay, on British men-of-war lying peace fully at their moorings, and fierce, grandilo quent little tugs that steam in and out per petually. The houses are mostly built in the Elizabethean style, of a light gray stone, oc casionally of white marble. We stayed for one night at the Queen's Hotel, where a melancholy functionary, in customary suit of solemn black, attended to our or ers, when he felt like it, and let us severely alone when he didn't—most generally the latter. The next day we left for the Lakes of Killarney—on the way there, five miles out of Cork, is Blarney Castle, celebrated for a stone which crowns one of its towers, and the kissing of which is supposed to give one the power of cajoling most successfully. Now I wanted to see that Castle—I wiped on the bridge of my nose, and gazed pa-tiently, but in vain. I did see the hollow which enclosed it, and the trees which sur-rounded it, but alas! the gray stone of which it is built was invisible to my longing ken.

At Killarney we stopped at the Royal Vic At Killaritey we stopped at the Royal Vic-toria, from the drawing room windows of which is obtained a lovely view of the lower lake, the island of Innisfallen, and a range of low lying mist covered hills beyond. Now, how on earth am I to describe to you the wonders of that charming, echoing, fasci-nating, romantic region of mountain, lake and valley? I have invoked the aid of a French dictionary, which stares up at me quite stupidly, as if wondering what it can do; and Longfellow, Florence Percy, Al-drich, and Miss Mulock lie about in picturesque confusion, ready to give any aid in their power to my dazed intellects. But I am sure that Ouiseau was never at Killarney and that neither of the above mentioned poets could by any possibility have entered its sacred limits, or I should find somewhere in the little blue and gold, and green and gold, and brown and gold volumes, some such headings as, "Lines on Hearing Paddy Blake's Echo"—"Ode to Innisfallen"—

Thanksgiving Hymn-written after safely passing through the rapids under Wei Bridge"—"Stanzas to the raw-boned Rosi nante which bore me safely up the precipi tous ascent of the Gap of Dunlo of the cannon which thundered at its side, threatening destruction to each equestrian N. B.—Said cannon being used for no more sanguinary purpose than to wake the slumbering echoes on the mountain sides-

No, no, I shall have to fall back upon my self, so Je commence. We left the hotel one sunny morning, and rode eleven miles in a jaunting car—a very peculiar vehicle by the way, entirely open, in which you sit back to back, in-tead of vis-a-vis, and clutch your neighbor frantically at sharp corners. To the left of the we can be the very control of the left of the wear of the left of t we caught sunny glimpses of the lakes, with the mountains rising steeply the water's edge-to the right were stubble fields, hedged with a prickly growth of whinns, and starred with golde coom or purple heather. Farther on were the game preserves of an adjacent nobleman-the picturesque, vine-covered porter's lodge of his estate—a church with a cross on its sum-mit—and in the read, poor Paddy driving his squealing and inevitable pig. Here and there were squalid, straw thatched huts, with their a church with a cross on its su ragged, barefoot tenants peering curiously from the low doorway; and where our farners' wood piles risc, were cubes of peat from the neighboring bog. A young Englishman of our party, hearing my desire to obtain a speci-men of irish heather, offered a penny to any of a group of juvenile tawny haired beggars who should first obtain it—instantly half a dozen sprang to the search, and fought and scrambled over the promised coin, and pur-sued the car like a pack of wolves, gathering strength at every step—begging pennies to buy books—or, as one urchin expressed it,

"just for the fun of it." In vain the gentlemen threw coppers till they were copper-less still the yellow haired pack pursued, panting, breathless, but undannted. De-corous John Bull bore it patiently for some miles, and then, muttering something under his breath, which sounded monstrously like a little wicked word, ordered one of the guides to drive them back with his whip-and, tender-hearted still, not to hurt them.

and, tender-hearted still, not to hurt them.
At the entrance of the Gap of Dunloe is the cottage of Kate Kearney, a beauty whose fame has spread far and wide. A grand-daughter of the belle, aged, frilled and freckled, showed her placid face to request us to take a drop of the Mountain Dew (Irish whicker distilled in lawless obscurity in the whiskey, distilled in lawless obscurity in the darkest recesses of adjacent valleys, where no prowling government agent can pene-trate,) or a sup of goat's milk, for which one is expected to pay fabulous amounts. Again we were attacked, this time by sellers of bog-oak ornaments, venders of lace collars and the like, who pursued us with importu-nate entreaties, who bothered and perplexed and harassed us, who appeared in the wildest spots and at the most unexpected moments, who came between us and our best thoughts who came between us and and most brilliant comments, until disgust of the fawning, persistent, uncouth pea-and most brilliant comments, until disgust of the fawning, persistent, uncouth peasantry reigned supreme, and almost blotted out even the fair, wild, breezy landscape. At the entrance of the Gap, horses awaited us, and mounted on these, with a guide at every bridle, we rode on, over stony and precipitous paths, with the Purple Mountain on one side and McGillicuddy Reeks on the other, past Serpent Lake, into whose dark, silent waters St. Patrick banished the last silent waters St. Patrick banished the last reptile from the Emerald Isle—through the silent omme Dhuo or Black Valley, desolate and wild, with over all the most splendid fluctu-ations of light and shadow. Here the sound of a cannon thundered and reverberated and died in distant murmurs—there a blind fiddler evoked sweet, tremulous echoes, that rose and fell and fainted, until they sounded like the mocking laughter of distant brownies or the songs of elves. At the Upper Lake a boat awaited us, and At the opper bace a boat water us, and seating ourselves in it, we slipped through the gloaming, past the frowning crags of Eagle's Nest—the foaming waters under Weir Bridge—Ross Castle, and the Abbey of Innisfallen—through the sweetest and most exquisite views of hills and sunset-dyed currents-down the three lakes-home The ride from Killarney to Dublin, a distance of an hundred and seventy-seven miles, is stale, flat and unprofitable. Arrived here we were entertained in dreary splendor at the Shelbourne Hotel for one night, slept under the same roof with five lords and ladies, and came to the Imperial the next morning in disgust. Lower Sackville street, on which the hotel is situated, is the Broad way of the place—wider—quite as bustling, and infinitely less stylish. The Liffey flows just above us, a narrow, turbid, sluggish stream, embanked like a canal, and crossed by seven bridges. I am impressed by three things here. The meanness of the horse flesh; large barouches, landaus and clarences being drawn by one horse, and that a hack which a New York cabman would sniff at. The perfectly-fitting kid gloves worn by the shabilest of people—this is accounted for by a visit to Supplee's, where I rested my hands on a cushion, and was duly fitted with Jocaux', but, at the rate of cighty severe. Joeaux' best, at the rate of eighty-seven and a half cents a pair. Surely Dublin is Paradise Regained, and its crowning happiness, gloves which do not entail bankruptcy hess, gives which do not entail bankruptcy over every half dozen pair. Lastly, I am impressed with the infinitesi-mal forms into which butter is moulded. You ask for the saltless golden article—and the dress-coated, white-cravatted, whitegloved pomposity, yelept waiter, hands you a bowl, in which you discover half a dozen beautifully stamped, nutmeg-sized nuggets. You stab one with a fork in waiting, and discover presently that it will cover about one You spread third of your slice of bread. and eat it meckly, venturing after a while, to say in persuasive, dulect tones, "Butter, if you please." The white-gloved pomposity looks injured, but hands you the bowl, from which you endeaver, guiltily, to extract two lumps. Your intention is discovered, and frustrated, while outraged innocence frowns above you in a way which effectually prevents any further demonstration, as you moodily munch the but terless remainder. In justice let me say that I do not think my tormentor's motives were mean or unworthy, but simply arese from a sense of what is dignified and be coming.

In conclusion, be it known, that the ladies of Dublin trail their skirts on moist side walks, or clevate them in awkward loopsthat the waterfalls rest upon their necks in a state of deplorable humble-mindednessthat their faces are broad, and their noses snub, and themselves guys.

The gentlemen cultivate Dundreary whiskers-wear the tighte tof unmentionables. and the most stylish of shooting jackets-and altogether demean themselves in a manner which would bring down upon them an avalanche of flattering epithets in American drawing-rooms.

And now, dear Post, if you are not tired And now, dear Post, it you of me, I am of you, so for the present, revoir.

CURIOUS INVENTION .- The Norwegian automatic cooking apparatus is amor attractions at the Paris Exhibition. said that by this machine, meat and other food, after having been boiled for five minutes, may be cooked completely in three hours, without artificial heat of any kind. The apparatus consists of a box lined with non-conducting materials, and two tin eases, in which the food to be cooked is placed. boiled for five minutes over a gas or stove, and then inserted in the box and her-metically shut in with a cover also lined with isolating substances. When the box is open found completely cooked, without or attention having been needed, may be moved about, carried b may be moved out, carried by hand or otherwise, during the operation.

At the late election in Lower Canada, a Mr. La Francois, who was a candidate for the Provincial Legislature, was offered $400 to retire from the canvass, which he de-clined. He was afterwards forcibly abouted and carried off, so that he could not be pre-

MARYLAND.—At the municipal and judicial election in Baltimore the extire Democratic ticket was elected, the majority for the Democratic candidate for Mayor being TENNESSEE, -- Gov. Brownlow has been elected U. S. Senator by 24 majority on joint ballot. He will take his seat in 1869. VIRGINIA.—It is reported as certain that the state votes in favor of a convention, and that the convention will be Radical by twenty-one majority. Richmond has elected the fol-lowing Radicals, after a three days' contest; Hunnicutt, Judge Underwood and two color-Hunnicutt, Judge Underwood and two color-ed men. The vote was as follows: For a convention, 145 white and 1,184 colored; against a convention, 4,712 white and 11 co-lored; majority for the convention, 605; majority for the Radical ticket in the whole city, 438. The contest through the state seems to have been almost strictly a contest between the white and near o voters. a contest between the white and negro voters.

The negroes mobbed several of their race who voted the Conservative ticket in Richmond, but the police and soldiers protected them. There are 13 negroes among the Radi-

NORTH CAROLINA. - The opposition to the convention is increasing, but a majority will probably vote in favor of it. Very few negro delegates have been elected in this state, the whites having a majority of about 25,000, and the Conservatives will, it is said, control that body.

PENNSTLVANIA.—The official majority for Judge Sharswood (Dem.) is 922. Onto.—According to the official returns it Offlo.—According to the official returns it appears that the majority for Hayes, Republican, for Governor, is 2,911. Hayes, R., received 243,121 votes, and Thurmau, D., 240,210 votes, a total vote of 483,331. Last year the Republicans polled 256,302 votes, and the Democrats 213,606, a Republican majority of 42,696. By a comparison it appears that the Republican vote has decreased 13,181, the Democratic vote has increased 26,604: the Republican majority has creased 13,181, the Democratic vote has in-creased 29,604; the Republican majority has decreased 39,785, and the total vote of the state has increased 23,423; and is the largest vote ever polled in the state. The vote upon the negro suffrage amendment to the State Constitution is not yet officially an-

Iowa ... The returns from Iowa indicate that a larger popular vote was poiled this year than at any previous election. From the reported majorities in the various counties, about one-half of them being official, it appears that the vote for Governor was, for Merrill, R., 86,963, and for Mason, D.,

Merrill, R., 86,963, and for Mason, D., 62,976, a Republican majority of 23,987. Last year the Republican majority was 55,412. The total vote this year is 149,969, last year it was 147,042.

INDIANA.—We have returns from thirty-five counties, by which it appears that the Democratic gain this year is 11,610, as compared with the majorities in the same counties last year. The Democratic grans in ties last year. The Democratic organs in the state claim a majority for their party on the popular vote at the recent election, some m claiming as high as 14,000 majority. The Republican majority at the election last year was 14,202. None but local officers, however, were elected this year, so that the relative gains and losses do not materially affect the political situation; and besides the majorities may be made to vary according as to what vote is taken.

MONTANA.—In Montana the election for Delegate to Congress is officially reported to have resulted in 6,004 votes for Cavanaugh, D., and 4,896 for Saunders, R., a Democratic majority of 1,108.

majority of 1,108.
Louisiana AND Alahama.—The official reports of the Southern registration elections in Louisiana and Alabama have been received. In Louisiana there were 79,486 negroes and 42,370 whites registered, and at groes and 42,570 whites registered, and at the election for a Convention 75,400 votes were cast, nearly all being in favor of the Convention. In Alabama, out of 166,289 registered voters, 87,672 voted in favor of a Convention and 5,685 against it.

CALIFORNIA. - Returns from thirty-four counties make the success of Sprague and Fitzgerald (Democrats) certain.

Foreign Intelligence.

TALY.—The Italian government seems to have submitted to the demands of France, though it is stated that Menotti Garibaldi is OUR CAVALRY.—The Indians have still in the field, and that General Garibaldi has once more escaped from Caprera. latter has issued another proclamation, which of your men will fall off their horses, and the other half will run away."

Life European Powers to unite with France Life Mr. Charles Dickens has decided to Rome. A mine was exploded under the barracks of the Zouaves, but no lives were lost.

The rising was suppressed, and all is now quiet. At the last accounts, Garibaldi was at deposit of three centuries would not exceed response to the control of the city and the second of the second of Junez. Diaz was the only opposing candidate, and the state of Vera Cruz cast its electoral vote for him, though the other states all united in supporting Junez. Diaz was not a willing opponent of Junez, as he preferred his present position of General-inchief of the army to the Presidency. It certainly gives him quite as much power, and he does not run the risk of dethronement. The Mexican election was conducted peaceably, and its history may be summed up in a few words. Juarez did not wish to be President; he prevailed upon the army to coax him to be a candidate; the army pre-vailed upon the people to vote for him; and he was elected. HAYTL—The last insurrection, that of the cos, has been suppressed by Sainave, who issued a proclamation, congratulating the Haytiens upon the return of peace; and the world is now ready to hear of a new re-

TO SOL

People in this country generally look upon mushrooms as a sort of luxury, and not as an actual article of food. The inhabitants of Italy, France, Germany and Russia use large quantities of various species rejected by us as articles of food. Indeed, fungi not only constitute for weeks together the sole diet of thousands, but the residue, either fresh or dried, is variously preserved in oil, vinegar, or brine, and sold to the poor. In Italian market, which is perhaps largely supplied than many other with fungi, there is a regular inspector, whose business it is to look over the various lots brought into the market, and if any species or speci-mens of a poisonous nature are detected they are destroyed. Now, curious enough, the one we so highly prize, the common mush-room, Agaricus campestris, is by the Italians considered unwholesome, and is consequently rejected by them. There are upwards of thirty species indigenous to this country, that might be used as articles of food, but great caution must be used by those who gather them not to pick the doubtful ones. gather them not to pick the countries. Although, generally speaking, there is but one species brought to our markets. Another may frequently be seen gathered with the control of the seen gathered with the control of the seen gathered with the control of the seen gathered with the seen gathered wit them. This generally grows to a much larger size, is not so tender, and has always a yellowish tinge on the top of the pileus or cap. This is Agaricus exquisitus, or Georgi; notwithstanding its name, denoting its exquisite flavor, it is by far inferior to campestris and its varieties. This Agaricus ex-quisitus is largely used for making catsup; it grows in the salt marshes in the eastern counties in enormous quantities. As a nutritious article of food, the mushroom, perhaps, yields to none of the higher forms of the vegetable kingdom. It is next in importance to butcher's meat. And curious enough, and which is indeed almost an anomaly, mushrooms breathe or give off car-bonic acid gas the same as animals, and absorb oxygen. It is a very remarkable fact that these lowly plants come nearer to the animal kingdom than the higher forms of the vegetable world. All fungi did not absorb oxygen and give off carbonic acid, but, so far as has been ascertained, all the edible species do. Of all vegetable productions these are the most highly azotised—that is, they come nearer in their chemical composition to the flesh of animals than any other of the vegetable kingdom. They also furnish considerable quantities of albumen and osmazome; this last is the principle that gives its peculiar flavor to meat gravy. Besides the solid in mushroom diet we have what is well known to almost everybody, the expressed thown to almost everybody, the expressed juice called catsup, catchup, or ketchup, This word, which is spelt in various ways, is quite a puzzle to philologiste; some suppose it to be derived from Kuck-hup, a Hindontance word for turtle. In the Caisinier Royal par Viart it is mentioned among the "petites sauces" as ket-chop. If more attention were paid to these lowly forms of the vegetable kingdom, many a good meal might be obtained by those who now too often want a dinner.

73/ A Mississippi planter gave employment, during the past season, to thirty or forty negroes. The choicra broke out among them, and a physician was called, whose treatment promised quick success. An old negro among the number, however, was not satisfied with the progress of events, and with a great show of religious zeel and reverential awe, made it known to his fellows that God had appeared to him and revealed the strange fact that, if the cholera-smitten negroes would procure one handful of sait and the other full of figs, and siz beneath a salt, and seating themselves under the charmed sycamore, proceeded to dose them-selves as directed. The result was rather no great dread of our cavalry, according to "Spotted Tail." He recently remarked in conversation—"We don't care for your caadds to the prevailing excitement. He exhaust the people of Italy to persevere in their hundred yards of them, and then if we give patriotic struggle, and bids them hope that our whoop and shake our buffalces, one-half the European Powers to unite with France in a general conference for the settlement of the Roman question, and to prevent the recurrence of the recent events in Italy.

A rising was attempted on the 22d in Rome. A mine was exploded under the barrack of the Zouwer, but a live works and arranged to sail from England three works are like.

and forty-two miles from Rome.

FLORENCE, Oct. 26, noon.—Garibaldi is

By an easy mathematical calculation it will

RUSSIA.—The treaty with the United States for the sale of the Russian possessions has been ratified by Russia.

MEXICO.—The Mexican Presidential election has resulted in the success of Benito tion has resulted in the success of Benito

THE LADY'S FRIEND.

Splendid Inducements for 1868.

The proprietors of this "Queen of the Monthlies" announce the following povelets for next year

A DEAD MAN'S RULE. By Elizabeth Prescott, author of "Hox a Woman had Her Way," &c.
THE DEBARRY FORTUNE. By Amanda M. Dougles, author of "La Trust," "Stephen Dane, "&c. FLEEING FROM FATE. By Louise Chandler

Monitor, author of "Jone Clifford," &c.

These will be accompanied by numerous short. stories, posius, &c., by Florence Percy, Harriet Prescott Spoiford, Mrs. Louise Chandler Moulton, Miss Bell, Mrs. Hosmer, Frances Lee, &c., &c.

The Lady's Friend is edited by Mrs. HENRY PETERSON, and nothing but what is of a refined ensued. and elevating character is allowed entrance into its

The Fashions, Fancy Work, &c.

A Splendid double page finely colored Fashion Plate, engraved on steel, in the fluest style of art, will illustrate each number. Also other engravings, illustrating the latest patterns of Dresses, Cloaks, Bonnets, Head-dresses, Fancy Work, Embroidery, &c.

BEAUTIFUL STEEL ENGRAVINGS.

The beautiful steel engravings which adorn The Lady's Priend are, we think, unequalled

TERMS: $2.50 A YEAR.

SPLENDID PREMIUM OFFERS

We offer for THE LADY'S FRIEND precisely the same premiums (is all respects) as are offered for THE POST. The lists can be made up either of the Magazine, or of the Magazine and Paper conjointly, as may be desired.

The Terms for Clubs of THE LADY'S FRIEND re also precisely the same as for THE POST- and the Clubs also can be made up for both Magazine and Paper conjointly if desired

The contents of The Lady's Friend and of the Post will always be entirely different. 1 7 Specimen numbers sent on receipt of 15 cts.

Address

DEACON & PETERSON,

No. 319 Walnut St., Philadelphia.

SAD MISFORTUNE TO A YOUNG LADY .- A young lady of Canandaigua, New York, went to a dentist to have some teeth extracted, and in the operation he cracked her jaw, but she being under the influence of chloroform, was insensible to her misfortune. The dentist did not discover it, put attempted to extract another tooth, pulling out a piece of the jawbone of sufficient size to contain two the jawbone of sufficient size to contain two teeth. By this time she began to recover from the effects of the opiates, and they were again administered, and a physician and surgeon being immediately summoned, her jaw was set. About six weeks after, the young lady (being obliged to breakfast, dine and sup on gruel) was informed by her physician in attendance that she might loosen the bandage and commence to use her jaw, which being done, she found that her jaw, which being done, she found that her jaw. which being done, she found that her jaws were set; and, after vain efforts to operate them, they gave up in despair, feeling that

THE TOWER OF BABEL. - The Tower of Babel is an edifice of which little is known by the ordinary world, but the London Bookseller, it seems, has discovered some one who knows a great deal about it, and, also, about the great deluge. That periodical contains the following announcement: "To be sold by private contract, the copyright of a work in manuscript, entitled the Tower of Babel Discovered, and the Deluge Explained. The substance of which is contained in about three hundred and fifty foolscap quarto regge. The outbox and compiler asserts that seller, it seems, has discovered some one who substance of which is contained in about three hundred and fifty footscap quarto pages. The author and compiler asserts that to return to their old-fushioned dress; the coveries of the present age, namely their HORRIBLE SCENE-A CHILD TRAMPLED AND BITTEN TO DEATH BY A DONKEY. Tuesday two children of Mr. Amos Champ-lin, residing on the T. R. Hazard farm in this town, were playing near the orchard, one of them got upon the wall, when a don-key, which was kept in the orchard, seized the child, and dragging him down, commenced to trample and bite him. Mean while, the other child, seeing what occurred made for the house and informed its mother made for the house and informed its mother that little Horace had been killed by the donkey. The mother hastened to the orchard and saw the terrible spectacle of the brute grawing the poor child's throat and face. The poor woman gave a scream which so startled the donkey that he retreated a few paces, when the mether respect the few paces, when the mother reacued the locomotive goes, up or down a plain that face of the child were shockingly mutilated. We understand the child died on Wednesday.

-Narragamett (R. I.) Times.

Beatty, a widow lady, met her death in a most singular manner. She was in the act of getting on a horse, when a common sewing needle, which stack in her dress, caught. of getting on a horse, when a common sew—was generally supposed that the "inquefacing needle, which thick in her dress, caught then" would not occur this year on account in the saidle and was driven in her body of the Italian troubles, and it was, therefore, ing needle, which stack in her ording needle, which stack in her body in the saidle and was driven in her body near her breast, slightly piercing her heart. She lived only about half an hour.

137 A large amount of wheat is being shipped from Lake Michigan ports to Montreal and other Canadian ports, whence it goes by the St. Lawrence to Europe. Eight this poes by the St. Lawrence to Europe. Eight this poes by the St. Lawrence to Europe. Eight work to be the state of the said to marry him.

128 Admiral Farragut saw in Sweden an entire battery of breech-loading cannons of wrought iron, taken out of a vessel sunk duverage to the said to wheat for the week is destined for Canadian ports for export.

137 Madison, Florida, gushes with matri-nonial bliss. Three weddings in one night monial bliss.

The Senator Summer, Baron Holstein

Correspondence of the New York Express.

A public man sometimes becomes so publie that his private affairs command a publicity which it would be an affectation of the press not to notice. Hence I send you the

Not two years ago the long-known bache Not two years ago the long-known backelor, Charles Sumner, became a Benedict. A highly educated, and, in many respects, an accomplished man, of good manners, and better appearance, naturally enough, stood high among the ladies of Boston. And he had no difficulty in whuning the hand of a widow (from one of the F. F. V.'s of Boston, who sacrificed no inconsiderable joinfure in marrying him. The honeymoon had all the apparent charm that honeymoons. Amanda M. Douglas, Mies V. F. Townsend, August Bell, Mrs. Hosmer, Frances Lee, Ac. Ac.
The Lady's Friend is edited by Mrs. HENRY her husband to Washington, and new scenes

Among the men composing the Diplomatic Corps in Washington was Baron Holstein, of dinuer. An acquaintance ensued, and friend-ship followed, such as naturally and honorship followed, such as naturally and nonerably springs up between the sexes, with kindred tastes and aspirations. The Baron attended to the lady in matinees and soirces, and in other places, and occasionally escorted her from the Senate, where both had been to hear the Senater speak. Mr. Sumper becoming displaced with this counsit. ner becoming displeased with this acquaint ance-ship—it cannot be properly called inti-macy—wrote a letter to Baron Holstein, in preferred prize fighting to horse racing. which, while complaining of it, report says he insinuated something not honorable to the wife. The Baron wrote back a letter, which, in substance, he said, there was no cause of offence whatever—he had been po-lite to Madame, as he was to other ladies of similar accomplishments, and nothing had ever happened which propriety, or good taste forbade, but if the Senator was not satisfied with that, he was ready to give him satisfaction as a man of honor demanded. This correspondence was the beginning and end of part first,—but Mr. Sumner, re-port says, then became cool to his wife, and the lady and the Baren became more reserved in their intercourse. Then Mr. Sumner, as Chairman of our Committee of Foreign Affairs, wrote to the Prussian Minister of Foreign Affairs, the distinguished Bismark, that if he (B.) would recall the Baron, he (S.) would be obliged. The adroit Bismark yielded to the potential positions of the American Chairman of Foreign Affairs, and the Baron was recalled to Ber

Mrs. Sumner next became acquainted with this correspondence, and naturally enough was indignant beyond all power of description. Her indignation naturally rested upon that part of the correspondence which, it was alleged, touched her honor. The end of all this is that Mrs. Summer has gone her way to Europe—their common estab-lishment in Washington being given up, and another is taken by the Senator for the this, relating both to the Senator and the lady, such as may be expected from early denouements in such a marriage affair, but denomements in such a marriage affair, but the basis of the report in Boston is such as I send you. What I have written is in everybody's mouth, and it may possibly be erroneous in some of the details, but in substance probably correct. I send it to you for publication, because what, if anything, is wrong here, had better at once be set right, to stop the tongues of the thousands that are making more out of a few facts. that are making more out of a few facts.

counties make the success of Sprague and Fitzgerald (Democrats) certain.

West Virginia.—The returns show large Democratic gains, but the state has probably gone Republican by a reduced majority. Last year the vote was, Republicans 25,862. Democrats 17,158; Republicans majority 6,644.

The Plains—The Indian war is probably ended. It is announced that the Peace Commissioners have concluded treaties with nearly all the tribes.

And the other full of figs, and six beneath a sycamore tree and swallow the contents of both hands, taking first a mouthful of salt and then a bite of figs, that the cure that would be effected would be sufficiently mirror and the least stopic way to the old long tunie, for garrison work, while coat, which can be worn either alone or ference in their behalf. Accordingly, twelven majority 6,644.

The Plains—The Indian war is probably ended. It is announced that the Peace Commissioners have concluded treaties with negroes threw away their "doctor stuff, and supplying themselves with the figs and sait, and seating themselves under the charmed sycamore, proceeded to dose them. patent leather, as hitherto. It seems that practice has proved that what was very suitable to Zouaves was not adapted to the ma-

The new principle of Mount Cénis Railway is thus briefly explained to those who are not scientific and not initiated already into the mystery: The new principle, like all other great ones, is simple. A centre rail, like a stair banister, is placed on strong supporters fourteen inches above the other rails. The engine is provided with four horizontally placed wheels, which are con-nected with the cylinders, and may be made to "bite" the centre rail. These wheels to "bite" the centre ran. These where are clear on level ground, but when an asent or descent is reached, they are screw down and catch the centre rail, and off (September) passenger trains will be climb-ing the Alps every day and looking down on the world from a height of serily seven thousand feet.

A boy, about eight years old, fell on the point of a pocket knife, at West Suffield, Ct., a few days ago, and bled to death from the wound. last week. In one case, the bridegroom was fourteen, and the blushing bride a charming widow with five children.

THE LAST WORD.

BY MATTHEW ARNOLD.

Creep into thy narrow bed, Creep, and let no more be said! Vain thy onset! all stands fast; Thou thyself must break at last.

George are swans, and swans are geese, Let them have it how they will!

They out talked thee, hissed thee, tore thee, Better men fared thus before thee; Fired their ringing shot and passed, Hotly charged—and broke at last.

Charge once more, then, and be dumb! Let the victors, when they come, When the forts of folly fall, Find thy body by the wall.

Corps in Washington was Baron Holstein, of Prussia, whom the Prussian King had attached to the Prussian legation there, "to spy out the land." Naturally enough, he courted the acquaintance of Charles Sumner, the Chairman of the Committee of Foreign Affairs in the Senate, who, at a dinner party, introduced his wife to the Baron, and who was placed beside her at dinner. An acquaintance ensued and friend-Barr, heard at Chambershurz, in 1825, that Barr, heard at Chambersburg, in 1825, that a person "receiving a counterfeit note from an innocent person in payment, and keeping it by him six months without notice, was guilty of gross negligence—and must sustain the loss." The decision may be found in 13th Sergeant & Rawle, page 318.

17 John B. Gongh was hissed at the

H. R. R. RADWAY'S READY RELIEF. To be used on all occasions of pain or sudden sickness. Immediate relief and consequent cure for the ailments and diseases prescribed, is what the Haller guarantees, to perform. Its motto is plain and sys-tematic: Hall surely cure! There is no other remedy, no other LININENT, no kind of PAIN-RIL LER, that will check pain so suddenly and so satisfactorily as Ranway's HEADY HELIEF. It has been in the counting-room and at the forge, among civilians and soldiers, in the parior and in the hospital, throughout all the varied climes of the earth, and one general verdict has come home: " The moment taken inwardly according to directions, PAIN, from whatever cause, ceases to exist?" Use no other kind for Sprains, or Burns, or Scales, or Cure, CHAMPS, BRUISES, OF STRAINS. It is excellent for CHILBLAINS, MOSQUITO BITES, also STINGS OF POI-NOUS INSECTS. It is unparalleled for SUN STROKES, APOPLEXY, RESUMATISM, TOOTHACKE, TIC DOLOU-EEUX, INFLANMATION OF THE STONACH, BOWALS, KIDNEYS, &c. Good for almost everything. No family should be without it. Follow directions and a speedy cure will be effected. Sold by Drugglets. Price 50 cents per bottle.

$8.00 for 50 Cents. THREE NEW THINGS,

The greatest living curlosity of the age. Agents wanted. Circulars sent free. Samples for trial. Address M. L. HYRN, Box 4009 P. O. New York City Office N2 Cedar street,

DEAFNESS CURED. - Dr. STILWELL'S ORGANIC VI nnaron. It fits into the ear and is not perceptible, removes singing in the head, and enables deaf persons to hear distinctly at church and pulyic se-

A Treatise on Deafness, Catarrh, Consumption and Cancer; their causes, means of speedy relief and ultimate cure, by a papil of the Academy of Medi-cine, Paris. Sent free for 10 cents. Scrofulous disgoes successfully treated. Dr. T. H. STR. WKLL, 21 East Washington Place, New York City, where all enally at 1002 Pine St., Philadelphia, Tuesday next

Holloway's Fills and Ointeent.—We stand against at the thousands hourly harded to a premature grave, victims of having selected the first symptoms of disease. Whether the complaint originates in the body, or be introduced accidentally

MARRIAGES.

Marriage notices must always be accompanied

On the list of May, 1867, by the Rev. Wm. Roldneson, Mr. Enwitti H. Darries to Miles Victoria. Water both of this city, on the lith of Ott, by the Rev. Andw. Manship, Mr. Thomas Grees to There Wilson, both of this

On the Stir of Oct., by the Rev. J. H. Peters, Mr. I. L. Hunnigues, of Jefferson, Texas, to Miss Lozze C. He ser, daughter of Mr. John Blekey, of the city in the fiet of Oct. by the Rev. M. D. Kurte, Mr. this city.

On the 17th of Oct., by the Rev. Wm. Suddards, D.

D., The Was S. Barreca, M. D., of this city, to Many
A. Sayt & of New Jersey.

On the Island Oct., by the Rev. J. Spencer Kennaci. Mr. Cavin Senar to Miss Lita E. Moss, both of this city.

DEATHS.

$ 17" Notices of Deaths must always be accompa-

On the 25d of O.C., ELEZA, wife of Wim. Overing-ton, in her 77th year. On the 21st of O.C., HANNAH STEVENSON, relief of the 14st Wim. Abbott. On the 21st of Oct., Mr. Jacon S. Mystzer, in his Gid year. In the 20th of Oct., Mrs. Sans & Greanwood, in or Geth year. On the 20th of Oct., Janes R. Campuzzt, in his On the 19th of Oct. ELIZABETH EVERLY, in her On the Inh of Oct., Mrs. Mangarer, wife of John Hill, aged 25 years. Hill, aged Expans.
On the 18th of Oct., Mr. Elias R. Clayfox, in his 42d year.
On the 18th of Oct., Mr. Elias R. Clayfox, in his 42d year.
On the 18th of Oct., Henneca K. Bartham, in her 66th year.

THE SATURDAY EVENING POST.

NEUTRAL IN POLITICS.

New and Splendid Premium Engraving.

GEMS OF NATIVE AND POREIGN LITERATURE.

The proprietors of "the oldest and heat of the week leat" offer unequalled inducements to those who mean the

"WASHINGTON AT MOUNT VERNON."

For any Promium Engraving this year we shall give the above splended portrait of Waghingt is, engraved by the stinguished actual II. Wright Smith, from the calchivated portrait is. There is the left in a full length event, such as the background, and is there is Thomas Hacke No. A. This is a full length event, which then to be supported in the background, and there is the late that the entry of the late the strength of the late the strength of the strength of the late that the strength of the strength of

THE DEATH SHADOW OF THE POPLARS.

By MRS. MARGARET HOSMER, author of "The Morrisons," &c.

TRYING THE WORLD.

By AMANDA M. DOUGLAS, author of "In Trust," &c.

ST. GEORGE AND THE DRAGON.

By BLIZABETH PRESCOTT, author of "How a Woman Had Her Way," &c.

Besides our original contributions long and short, we also select in Stokies, Sketches, Essays, &c.

THE GEMS OF THE ENGLISH MAGAZINES;

And also give the NEWS OF THE WEEK. ACRICULTURAL ARTICLES. PORTRY. WIT AND HUMOR. RIDDLES, RE.

SPECIAL OFFER TO NEW SUBSCRIBERS.

New subscribers for 1868, will have their names entered on our list the very week their names are received. Thus new subscribers who send on their names by the first of November, will receive THE Post for November and December, in addition to the whole of 1868 making Fourteen Months in all. Those who send by the first of December, will receive Thereen Months. Tens of thousands should take advantage of this liberal offer.

NEUTRAL IN POLITICS.

FIRE Post is exclusively desoled to Literature, and therefore does not discuss political or sectarizing needions.

It is a common ground, where all can meet in barmony, without logar I to their views upon the political or sec-

LIST OF PREMIUMS.

									i or imamic act
1		For	A (84)	er there	15	6) i a	pince-	s Wheeler & Whien Sewing Machine, worth & Proposity Pound gold mounted worth or a Set of these Men, with	3.00
		For	٠				50		one dozen Sixor Flated Teaspoons worth, or half dagen Sixor Plated Fabinapoons, worth, or half dozen Sixor Plated Forks, worth or a Universal Charles Winger, worth or a Sixor Plated Caster, worth	2 (d) 2 (d) 2 (d) 2 (d) 10 (e)
10	•	Fire	[0.80]	aller a frame	at	5	(x) B	piece-	or a Set of Croquet touble painted worth a Selver Plated Cabe Basket worth or a Sever Plated Lee Pitcher, worth or a Wester's Unphridged Divingary, worth	12 0c 12 0c 12 0c
		Von				- 2	Ms		a lady's Washing Machine worth	14 16
		1				^	141		a Page School Watch, worth	20.00
			20.0			- 3	33	19	a Fine Double Barrel Gun, worth	-5.00
		1	104			- 5			a Fina Si ver Watch, worth	30.00
		1					65		an Allen's Patent Breech Loading Rifle, worth	745 DE
		Fin				2	*1	4.1	a Silver Pisted Tex Set me iding Collect Pot, worth or one of Spencer's Repeating Rifles, with Globe and Peop sight Ac worth	50 /00 50 for
		For	140		1.8	2	51		a Lady's Fine tiold Watch, worth	7.5 00
		1 100				į.	43		Appleton's American Cyclope in Involv. worth	HQ OX
		1 .				2	N.		a First Quality Melodeon (4 betaves) worth	70.00
		For				i	5.8		a First Quality Parlor Organ (toctaves) worth	1111.00

SPLENDID OFFER OF BOOKS. POSTAGE PREPAID BY US.

We will furnish any liceus on T. H. Peterson A. Bros. L. at of Publications Journal on person, or the club, and product prepared on the following terms. For tember there at $2.10 apreces, $3.00 worth of Books, for Saubscribers at $2.20 apreces, $3.00 worth of Books, for Saubscribers, at $2.00 apreces, $3.00 worth of Books, for Saubscribers, at $2.00 apreces, $3.00 worth of Books, for Saubscribers, at $2.00 apreces, $3.00 worth of Books, for Saubscribers, at $2.00 apreces, $3.00 worth of Books. be allowed to select such looks bound in doth or papers as he may de-publications, among which are the works of Sir Walter Sect. Charles her. Charles Lovet Capital Marratt Mis Lee Hentz Mis Stephen unett Wilkie Collins, G. F. R. James, Miss Parder, T. S. Arthur, Prof. cok. Blooks. T if Peterson & Bros. Catalogue with the relax, prices will be sent to any one on the receipt of a three cent sking. The postacou these backs will be proposed. All the other Premiums reacept the engravings are sent at the expense of the perform getting them.

REMARKS

The lists may be made up for The Post exclusively, or the Lady's Friend exclusively, or partly for one and partly the office, as is desired. If There see and substribes on a Promium ist, is to receive in addition to his paper or unregime a copy of other of the large and benefit by Promium Sted Provisions, as he may prefer a WASHINGTON AT HOURY VERNON. "EDWARD EVERTTIN HIS LIBRARY" of ONE OF LIFES HAPPY HOURS." The regular club subscribes do not receive an engraving unless the send one debur cate for it.

Subscriptions should be remitted as fastes ontained that the subscribes may receive their papers magnifies and engraving at some. Both old and new spheribets may be counted in the insta. The papers or magnifies with be sent to different post offices when describes The canvascer for a last for Premiums would, do wall to take with him a copy of The Post, a copy of The said a Fairno, and one of the Premium Lograngia. He can get these either by subscribing for the paper or against for a year, or by inclosing us one dollar, for which sum we will send a copy of all three to those decided which sum we will send a copy of all three to those decided which sum we will send a copy of all three to those decided with the supervision. The Sewing Machine offered is the Wheeler & Wilson No. 3 Machine, prior 233. We will also send this Machine, on the old terms of twenty subscribers and a xiv dollars, that is londedless in addition to the amount of the authorities prior if desired. And we will send any of the higher priced Wheeler & Wilson's Machines, if the difference in price is also remitted.

difference in price is also remitted.

Every him referred in our list of Premiums is guaranteed to be an excellent actiole. The valuation is simply the most refair price of the article in Philadelphia and New York. He means of pricebasing at the best sources and at who scale prices, and giving advertising in refuir, we are establed to effect these splended inducements. Our interest is to increase our circulation—giving those who help use do thus, the brieffet of the Premium. The articles will be cent by express, or as crieffed. No him will be charged for packing or boxing. The Frencht however, must be paid by the receiver of the Premium.

If MITPANCES —In remitting name at the top of your letter, refared on the country, and state. If possible procurse a post office order on Phyladelphia is a post office order to ear order. If a deat cannot be had send United States note. Do not send money by the Lapress Companies, unless you pay their charges.

TERMS.

Our terms are the same as those of that well known magazine. THE Lanv's FRIEND-in order that the cinhs may be made up of the paper and magazine confountly when so desired and are as follows One cops and the large Premium Engraving

A cope of the large and handsome Premium Forgraving () Washington at Moont Vernor, "will be a saxy to sake samino of a cire." The moder of a club of five and over, will of course set the engraving the additional control of the large and handsome premium forgraving () Washington at Moont Vernor, "will be assisted to sake samino of a cire." The moder of a club of five and over, will of course set the engraving the addition to be a say.

Alt member of a club wishing the engraving must remit one dellar extra.

Alt member of a club wishing the engraving must remit one dellar extra.

Subsarrises in British North America must remit taxony costs extra as we have to prepay the U.S. postage.

If The magazines of papers in a club will be sent to different Post offices if desired.

The contents of The Post and of The Lady's Friend will always be entirely different.

HENRY PETERSON & CO.,

No. 319 Walnut Street, Philadelphia.

THE AUTUMN OF THE HEART.

The corn bows its head to the sickle The nightingale's neurmur is hushed, Rain tears from the arbutus' trickle, Beech fruits in the forest lie crushed.

We have fought, but the battle is ending; We are wounded and sick from the fight; Blue shadows around us descending

We have journeyed not heeding our danger,

Cried in wild supplication above; We have loved till our eyes lost their anger, And hearts became sleepy with love. Red roses are dying which wreathed us, We are stamped with the iron that sears; Dead love in compassion bequeathed us

Its relic of tears.

We cringe to these sowers of sorrow, We cry for a blighted caress; We dream for a night; on the morrow We gather the tares of distress.

We how to our grief and privation, We pay for the pleasures that cloy; Our work is to build the foundation They love to destroy.

Oh! women with hearts brimming over With passions we never can feel, The world is too weak to discover The mystical love you conceal,

Our sorrow, not ours the reproving; Your triumph, and ours the defeat; Our lives are made bitter from loving, Why are you so sweet?

THE JEALOUS HUSBAND.

CLEMENT W. SCOTT.

"Well, yes," she replied, thoughtfully, "I can't say but I did; yet I'm sorry for Mary glanced up from her embroidery with a deepening flush in her cheeks and a quick flash in her blue eyes.

quick flash in her blue eyes.

"Why, aunt?" she said, half indignantly.
Mrs. Morgan considered a moment before she replied; and then her lips trembled and her kind eyes filled with tears.

"One reason is, I'm unwilling to part with you, child. You've Leen very dear to me through all the long years we lived together, and I shall miss you sally; but I'm not selfish enough to think only of my own happiness—my fears are for you, Mary. I'm in doubt whether Dick Denison will make you happy.

n you happy. Mary's tears had gushed out freely at her aunt's first words; but they dried on the in-stant at this implied doubt of her lover, and

Dick loves me well enough to be jealous each other very happy. But just here, my dear, allow me to give you a word of advice, and then we'll drop the subject for ever. Knowing your husband's one failing. as you do, never trifle with it; be discreet, prudish even, rather than arouse his suspicions. Above all, avoid Lawrence Lane. Indeed, I would advise you to cut his acquaintance at once.

Mary flushed a little, and bridled her pretty neck, showing plainly enough that the true metal was there; but the moment after she answered, meekly,

"Il mind what you say, aunt. As for Mr Lane, he and I parted for good last night; and now I mean to do my best to night; and now I mean to do my best to make Dick happy. I promised him as much last night when he put this ring on my finger—and I'll keep my word. A pretty ring, isn't it, aunt?" she added, holding up ring, isn't it, aunt?" she added, holding up the flashing diamond with fond pride; to rush past him and overtake his wife, who there was another one just like it at the shop, and old Squite Darwin bought it for a second thought struck him, and that thought was a suspicion, born of an old started on again at a loitering pace; but shop, and old Squite Darwin bought it for thought was a suspicion, born of an old started on again at a loitering pace; but shop, and old Squite Darwin bought it for the started on again at a loitering pace; but shop, and old Squite Darwin bought it for the started on again at a loitering pace; but shop, and old Squite Darwin bought it for the started on again at a loitering pace; but shop, and old Squite Darwin bought it for the started on again at a loitering pace; but shop, and old Squite Darwin bought it for the started on again at a loitering pace; but shop, and old Squite Darwin bought it for the started on again at a loitering pace; but shop, and old Squite Darwin bought it for the started on again at a loitering pace; but shop, and old Squite Darwin bought it for the started on again at a loitering pace; but shop, and old Squite Darwin bought it for the started on again at a loitering pace; but shop, and old Squite Darwin bought it for the started on again at a loitering pace; but shop, and old Squite Darwin bought it for the started on again at a loitering pace; but shop, and old Squite Darwin bought it for the started on again at a loitering pace; but shop a started on again at a loitering pace; but shop a started on again at a loitering pace; but shop a started on again at a loitering pace; but shop a started on again at a loitering pace; but shop a started on again at a loitering pace; but shop a started on again at a loitering pace; but shop a started on again at a loitering pace; but shop a started on again at a loitering pace; but shop a started on again at a loitering pace; but shop a started on again at a loitering pace; but shop a started on again at a loitering pace;

"Yes, more than he can afford to expend for such a tritle," replied Mrs. Morgan, gravely. "He would have been wiser if he

Mary bent her lips, and kissed the great, lustrous diamond; and then went on busily with her embroidery. She had need of it in a few months—for just before Christmas she and Dick were married; and went to house heeping as cosily and happily as a pair of robins, in a little vine-wreathed cottage, on the suburbs of the town.

"I'll teach you how to meddle with that which don't concern you if you don't stand perfect. Dick was a model for all husbands, and Mary a pattern for all wives; and the baby (for, of course, so complete a house-hold was not without its baby.) was just the awectest, rosiest, dearest little cherub that over gladdened a mother's heart. Dick was content to his heart's core; yet his old fail-ing was strong within him. His wife saw it, when they were out spending evenings to-gether, and when her beauty chanced to call forth some little admiration; but it caused Ah, me! but the summer was pleasant; Shall we die and lie dreaming again?

Would we yield the dull days of the present
For an hour of the past and its pain?
Do we hunger for kisses that stung us?
Or long for the lips that have lied?
Must we stoop for the gauntlet they've flung us?

This selfsame woman, being as discreet the was handsome, managed her cards

as she was handsome, managed her cards so skillfully, and conducted herself with such marked delicacy, that her jealous lord had never been able to find a solitary flaw in her character; and a twelvementh went by, and the honeymoon was not on Another of Dick's peculiar characteristics was love of dress and display. It was this weakness, or whatever we may term it, that led him to purchase the diamond engagement-ring; and which, on more occasions than one, had left him a light purse, and an uneasy consciousness of having commitan unpardonable folly. In this respect, his wife was just his opposite; although her love of beauty and completness amounted to a passion, she never suffered it to lead her out of the path laid down by prudence and economy.

"No, Dick, no; I don't need a new silk dress this season," she urged, as they were overlooking their wardrobe one fine spring afternoon; "I shall have this lavender silk "So you've accepted Dick Denison, Mary?"

"Of course, aunt, Didn't you suppose I would?"

Mrs. Morgan put down her sewing and turned her eyes towards the window with a terned her eyes towards the window with a sighed Dick, strolling from the room and down the street.

till. He stepped in, and the obliging young nan behind the counter had it before him in still.

such a color—only one more in our shop like it, and that went off to-day. Shall I fold it up, sir?"

"But the price?" faltered Dick; "what she interposed eagerly:

"What fault do you find in him, aunt?"

"Oh, a mere trifle! Only seven guineas and a half."

Dick's eyes dilated, but he was not the "But he's jealous, Mary!"
The girl blushed and dropped her eyes for so he bought the silk, and went home with The girl blushed and dropped her eyes for a moment in evident confusion; then she said, with an effort.

"But he'll get over that; he won't be jealous after—after—"

"After you are married, you mean?" added her aunt, kindly. "I don't know about that, child; marriage doesn't change a man's nature—and Dick Denison is very jealous and exacting. I've noticed it ever since he's been visiting here; but more particularly last night. He was on thorns while you were singing for young Lane, and while you were singing for young Lane, and hadn't self-possession enough to conceal his feelings."

Mary smiled, glancing down at the diamond engagement-ring that encircled her finger.

"Well," she continued, "it is done past "Well," she continued, "it is done past "Well," she continued, "it is done past "And on the coming Sabbath Mary fancy; and on the coming Sabbath Mary fancy; and on the coming Sabbath Mary then held in the name of a man bereft of reason, suppressed the amough the money, od, dear! We shall be ruined, unless I can devise some plan of retrenchment; here's nurse's wages, and the rent—oh, dear!"

"You sneaking, cowardly villain!" Dick shouted, "Il have at you pay for this!"

Then he rushed down the street, and to prove the street of a man bereft of reason, suppressed the amough the street of a man bereft of reason, suppressed the amough the street of a man bereft of reason, suppressed the sup finger.

"Well," she continued, "it is done past fancy; and on the coming Sabbath Mary recall now; and I believe I'm half glad that Dick loves ane well enough to be jealous. You know I like to be loved a great deal, aunt!"

"Yes; and I know that you deserve to "Yes; and "Yes; and "Yes; and "Yes; and "Yes; a "Yes; and I know that you deserve to be; but calm, reasonable affection, the 'perfect love that casteth out fear,' is better than hot-headed jealousy, Mary. But, as you say, it is done past recall new, and I won't cloud your sunshine by my misgivings. Duck's a good fellow, and loves you with the lower past and the happy days of his court-hip. Then his eyes grew soft and almost tearful, as his thoughts came back to his passion found vent in a comparison and rethe busy, happy little wife and cooing babe that awaited him at home. He glanced up that awaited him at home. He glanced up quickly at the western sun, impatient for his release; and just then a figure passing below attracted his attention. He started, looked more closely, and then flushed to his temples. Mary's figure—Mary's new hat, with its white plumes, and Mary's blue silk dress! He recognized the very trimming in the skirt; and he could have sworn to the golden hue of her hair.

But what was Mary out for and in her new dress, too? She said she wouldn't wear it until he could accompany her. He felt her hand and drew her back, hurt that she had forgotten her promise. "You dare not even deny it But at that moment she came opposite the bank, and paused. She meant to call for him—that was why she had worn the new dress. He started up, and hastened down to join her; but at the door he found young Lane ahead of him. His first impulse was to make head of him, and operate his wife, who a second thought struck him, and that thought was a suspicion, born of an old jealous wound that had once rankled at his heart. He drew back in the shadow of the thought was a suspicion, born of an oid jealous wound that had once rankled at his heart. He drew back in the shadow of the open door and watched them. He saw his wife more on for a pace or two, then pause again; and then Lane hastened on joined she darted past him and into her own characteristics.

open door and watched them.

The would have been wiser if he had bought a plain ring, and saved his money to set up housekeeping with."

"Yes, I know; but he said he meant to be extravagant for that one time," broke in the girl, eagerly; "and he did it to please me, because he knows I love beautiful things so. Don't blame him, aunt."

"Oh! I've no thought of blaming him; and if I had, it would be all the same to you," laughed her aunt, and she arose and left the room.

open door and watched them.

wife move on for a pace or two, then pause again; and then Lane hastened on, joined her, and the two passed from his sight.

What did it mean? He went back to his desk with a restless pain at his heart. We desk with a restless pain at his heart. We will do him the justice to say that he suspected no ill; but he was puzzled beyond endurance. What right had his wife to be walking with this man—her old admirer and suitor? An hour or so went by, and then lane hastened on, joined her, and the two passed from his sight.

What did it mean? He went back to his desk with a white, affrightened face.

"I did put it there, Dick," she said, forgular everything else but the loss of the ring; "but it is gone—I can't find it anywhere."

He laughed in her face—a bitter, taunting saiter? An hour or so went by, and then lane returned. Dick rose up from his blotted book, and confronted him.

"I'll teach you how to meddle with that which don't concern you if you don't stand out of my way," he replied, hotly, as he passed on to his own desk.

Dick snatched up his hat and made a rush for home. On the very threshold he changed his mind, and determined, instead of being frank and honest with his wife, to say nother had hannened but to wait and trank and honest with his wife, to say no-thing of what had happened, but to wait and watch for results. She met him in the pas-sage, flushed and breathless, as if from a walk; but she held out both her hands to welcome him as usual, and held up her lips for his kiss. He took her hands, but did not kiss her.

kiss her.
"You look tired, Mary," he said, carelessly.

"Have you been out?"
"Only a little way," she replied, evasively; "but don't stand here—come in and see baby."
He held her hands, looking straight into

"First, Mary, tell me where you've been," he said, sternly

She flushed painfully, and her lips began

"Den't ask me now, Dick," she impor-tuned; "you shall know all soon—only trust me a little."

me a little."

He dropped her hands, and turned from her with a cold, hard face.

"You're a fool for you're pains, sir!" screamed a poll-parrot, from its cage close by—giving expression to a phrase that some persons had taught it.

Mary went into her persons had taught it.

Mary went into her own room, and, catching up her baby, burst into tears.

"What can be the matter with Dick?" she sobbed; "I never saw him look so before. I must tell him everything, I suppose—and then he'll put an end to it all. Oh, dear! 'tis too bad."

At dimer, when Mary met her husband.

Oh, dear! 'tis too bad."

At dinner, when Mary met her husband again, she wore her brightest smile, and strove by all her arts to amuse and please him. But he was gloomy and silent—pleaded a headache—went to bed early, and left the following morning without bidding her good-by. Mary was deeply hurt, and her pride was touched besides.

Wednesday afternoon came, and Dick Denison, scarcely looking like himself—so sighed Dick, strolling from the room and down the street.

But his face belied his words—he was not content; at every step he was thinking of the pretty hat, with its white plunes, he had bought for Mary, and how shabby her old silks would look beneath it; and grumbling in his heart because of his poverty. Presently he was passing Stewart's, the linendraper's windows; and chancing to glance in, a very marvel of loveliness caught his eye—a silk, blue as the bosom of a May sky, and lustrous as light itself. He fancied Mary and lustrous as light itself. He fancied Mary wearing it, with her curls down, and her blue eyes all aglow, and his heart fairly stood golden hair! The sight seemed to turn his due eyes all aglow, and his heart fairly stood golden hair! The sight seemed to turn his idl. He stepped in, and the obliging young an behind the counter had it before him in histant.

"Just see, sir, it will stand alone; and ich a color—only one more in our shop like a madman. But striking into some bystreet, they cluded him; and an hour after her burned towards the bank dripping with perspiration and half beside himself with battled rage. Close by the bank he encountered Lane. tered Lane

"Stop, sir!" he exclaimed, seizing him by the arm. The young man faced him with a lock of genuine alarm; he had begun to believe that Dick Denison had in truth gone mad.

"For Heaven's sake, Denison," he began, what has possessed you?"
But Denison did not heed him; his eyes, wide and wild with horror, were fixed upon a ring that glittered on Lane's finger. Releasing his arm, he grasped his hand with a grip like steel.

"What's this?" he gasped, his face white and haggard; "my wife's ring—I'd swear to it among a thousand—and on your hand, sir? Your life shall pay for this insult; your life—do you hear?"

do you hear?"
Lane, fully believing himself in the hands oath, and then his passion found vent in a terrible outburst of accusations and reproaches. She heard them all, standing be fore him as white and still as sculptured marble. When he had finished, she said, quietly, but with a steel-like gleam in her blue eyes, "And you believe all this, Richard Denison?"

"Yes, and more," was the savage re-

"Very well; I shall not trouble myself to what was Mary out for, and in her change your opinion."

She was turning from him; but he seized her hand and drew her back.

"You dare not even deny it," he went on, his voice hoarse with mad rage. "You turn from me without a word of explanation. Great Heavens! that I should come to this—to call a woman my wife who does not scruple to take her engagement-ring from her finger and bestow it on another man!" "'Tis false, sir, and you know it," his wife replied, startled out of her lady-like calm-

"Prove it so, and I'll acknowledge myself deceive me. I'm your dupe no longer. Get out of my sight! I hope never to look upon your false face again. I have loved you well, but my hate is stronger than my love. Away! out of my sight, before I forget that you are a woman and I a man!"

Mary obeyed him without a word: and Mary obeyed him without a word; and Mary obeyed him without a word; and fifteen minutes later she was on her way to fit and the manutes, with her babe clasped convulsively to her bosom. Dick Denison went into his own room, and took down his pistols, and after examining them carefully, to assure himself they were in good shooting trim, he left his desolate house, and bent his steps in the direction of Lawrence Lane's lodgings. His face had a strange, wild look. lodgings. His face had a strange, wild look, and his eyes were the baleful glare of sheet-lightning. But Mr. Lane was not at home, the servant said; he took the evening train ondon. Dick ground his teeth with for London. Dick ground his teeth with angry disappointment.

The next morning found him weak and pale, with a terrible misery in his head, but feeling grimly resolute. He would never take back his wife again; and as soon as he had settled accounts with Lane he would be off for the Continent. Accordingly, he wrote an advertisement for the sale of all his property at auction, and spent the remainder of the day at the bank in hopes that Lane might return. But he did not, for he had a short leave of absence from the manager. The evening closed in chill and rainy. Guided more by the force of habit than anything else, the miscrable Dick sought his own home; but he found it dark and doselate. No pleasant lights, no loving face to late. No pleasant lights, no loving face to welcome him. He entered his wife's room with a heavy step. There stood the baby's crib, and Mary's work-basket—a thousand little things called up her image before him. For the first time he felt the true sense of all he had lost; and throwing himself into a chair, strong man that he was, he shook and sobbed like a very child.

"You're a fool for your pains, sir!"
screamed the parrot from his cage.

"I know I am," poor Dick responded;
"but I can't help it."

Then, remembering that the bird was his wife's, and a great pet, his heart being softened, he took pity on it.

"You're hungry, no doubt, poor fellow!" he said; and making his way to the pan-try, he succeeded in finding some cakes and

"Here, poor Poll!" he said; "I'll feed you for your mistress's sake, though she's broke my heart !"

The bird pecked at his hand voraciously, and something dislodged from the wires of the cage fell to his feet with a sharp tingle. stooped and picked it up, and a hot do of shame burned to his very finger tips. It was the diamond to be the wife the selfsame one he had accused his wife It was the diamond engagement-ring of giving to young Lane. He stood like one bewildered, holding the gleaming thing in his hand, and at the same instant there came an impatient knock at the door. He tottered out, and stood face to face with Lawrence Lane.

"I believed you to be a madman, at first, Dick Denison," he began; "I know you to be something worse now. I am here, at your wife's request, to make an explanation, sorely enough against my will, sir. I was summoned to her aunt's house immediately on any setting to sufficient party and stated to the summediately and from her setting to a summoned to her aunt's house immediately and from her setting to a summoned to her aunt's house immediately and from her setting to a summoned to her aunt's house immediately and from her setting to a summoned to her aunt's house immediately and from her setting the summoned to her aunt's house immediately and the summoned to her aunt's house immedin the summoned to her aunt's house immediately and the summoned t diately on my return to-night, and from her own lips I heard of the infamous charges you had brought against her. The lady who met me at the door of the County Bank, on Tuesday and Wednesday afternoons, was Miss Carrie Darwin. She chanced to wear a silk dress bought at Stewart's from the same pattern as your wife's; she also owns a diamond ring, the counterpart of your wife's. She and myself-Miss Darwin, I mean-are betrothed, and have exchanged rings. I still wear hers upon my finger-do

"Yes, yes I see," gasped poor Dick.

"Yes, yes I see," gasped poor Dios.
"Then, sir, one thing more, and I'm done.
Your wife—a true, tender woman, worthy of a better husband—had been out, as you not not not see of those afternoons; but of a better husband—had been out, as you perceived, on one of those afternoons; but she hesitated about telling you where. Hear the reason. She had been giving music lessons secretly, for a week or so, to help you on, as she said, because you had expended no much for that fatal blue dress; but she feared to let you know, lest you should object to it. Now, sir, are you satisfied—are you convinced that you are not a man, but a fool and brute?"

likewise was one of Captain Stearms' passengers, as well as Senor Arguellas, who had some business to wind up in Kingston, and intended taking with him Senora Antonia, the young lieutenant, and M. Dupont. The Neptune had brought to Cuba a mixed cargo of cutlery, cotton cloths, &c., &c., and was to return with a half cargo of various articles. Among the rest was a number of barrels of powder, belonging to the American more charts, which had been faund unsaleable fool and brute?"

Yes, I'm convinced," the poor fellow replied, creeping back to the desolate sitting-

The rain beat against the windows, and own folly. She would never come back to him again, and from henceforth life would be a curse. The best thing he could do would be to take the pistols with which he had threatened to shoot young Lane, and blow his own brains out. But he must see her first, and beg her to forgive him, that very night, no matter how bitterly she re-proached him. He was starting to his feet, but the opening of the front door arrested him; and the next instant a tremulous hand touched his shoulder. He looked up. There she stood at his side, with her babe in her

Dick." she said, her blue eyes filling with tears, "I've come back to you again. He went down on his knees at her feet.

I've found the ring, Mary," he gasped, holding it up.

"Oh, where? How did you find it? snatching it from him, with a glad cry.
"In the parrot's cage-he must have stolen it; but, Mary, can you ever forgive

She kissed the ring, and put it on her

"Yes, that was the way," she said. "Poll was out that day, and roamed all over the house—she stole it from the window where

'But, Mary," urged poor Dick, still on his knees, "you haven't answered me yet. I know I've been a fool—can you ever for-

"Yes, Dick," she replied at last, dropping a soft kiss on his brow. "I shouldn't have come back if I hadn't meant to do that. Come, get up now, and take baby; and don't you ever doubt me again."

Dick obeyed very meekly; and all the while the wicked parrot screamed malicious-ly, "You're a fool for your pains, sir!"

SCARLET LEAVES.

Content weighs heavier than gold In every perfect life; o will I search out sweets untold,

With bloom and beauty rife,

Nor will I of all peace be reft,
Because one joy takes flight;
May-flowers, revealed in some lone cleft,
Wake ever fresh delight.

And what if May-flowers fade? ah, then, Spring violets will bloom; And what if violets droop? again

June roses yield perfume; And what if roses fail? sweet pink And lily-bell shall come, With purple pansies, like, I think, To passion standing dumb.

And when all these are gone? then see

The asters, rich and rare, With stately dahlias grand and free, Take on their princely air. And when all summer bloom has fled: Why then the scarlet leaves, With autumn blushes flaming red.

Above the golden sheaves.

And thus I saw the May-flowers go,
The violets fade away,
The roses fall, the pinks laid low,
The lily-bells decay;
I watched the purple pansies droop,
The asters bloom and die,
The dahlias from their proud heights stoop,
And searlet leaves hang high.

Frail emblems of my life! I said,
Traced onward to this hour;
Ere one full-blossomed joy is dead,
Up springs another flower,
Until, amid the scarlet leaves

In Life's autumnal day, ohide my spirit that it grieves O'er one dead hope alway.

The light falls mellowed from the skies, The air is sweet with mint, And gold and scarlet fruitage

With autumn leaves, in tint.
Thus, oh my soul! with mellowed tone,
Pass softly on thy way,
Dead flowers—but ripe fruits, round thee strewn, Mid scarlet leaves to-day.

AN AFFAIR OF HONOR.

On a beautiful evening in the autumn of 1842, seven persons, including myself, were gayly conversing in front of the country-house of Senor Arguellas, situated about a mile from Santiago de Cuba, in the castern part of the island, and formerly its capital, when an incident suddenly occurred which had on our noisy gayety about the same effect as if a bombshell had burst in our midst; but first let me say a few words about the seven persons and the circumstances which had thus brought them together.

which had thus brought them together.

There were three American merchants, gentlemen from the South, who had many business relations with the Antilles, and proposed to set sail the next day, the weather permitting, (as the saying is,) for Morant Bay, Jamaica, in the ship Neptune, Captain Stearns; a licutenant of artillery in the Spanish army, nephew of our host; M. Dupont, a young and rich Creole, born of French and Spanish parents, and the reputed aspirant to the hand of Dona Antonia, the daughter and sole heiress of Senor Arputed aspirant to the hand of Dona Antonia, the daughter and sole heiress of Senor Arguellas, a charming beauty of eighteen, an age quite matured in that precocious climate; Captain Stearns of the Neptune, an Englishman of about thirty years, of a very gentlemanly aspect, and myself, at that time quite a young man, and scarcely recovered from a severe illness, which a year before had compelled me to pass over from Jamaica to the more even and temperate climate of Cuba, although there is only a difference of Cuba, although there is only a difference of the American, with difficulty, retain his anger. The lady seemed greatly as nished at the altered looks of those when she had left so recently. However, at a request of the Captain, she entered the hot and left the other visitors to themselves. Ten minutes later, we learned that Captain, she entered the hot and left the other visitors to themselves. Ten minutes later, we learned that Captain steemed greatly as nicked at the altered looks of those when she had left to other visitors to themselves. Ten minutes later, we learned that Captain, she entered the hot and left the other visitors to themselves. Ten minutes later, we learned that Captain, she entered the hot and left the other visitors to themselves. Ten minutes later, we learned that Captain steemed greatly as nicked at the altered looks of those when she had left so recently. However, at the left she other visitors to themselves. Ten minutes later, we learned that Captain steemed greatly as nicked at the altered looks of those when she had left so recently. However, at the left she other visitors to themselves. Ten minutes later, we learned the form of the captain steemed greatly and the American, with difficulty, the later and the left so recently. However, at the later altered looks of those when a great left the other visitors to the more request of the Captain, she car Cuba, although there is only a difference of five degrees between the two islands. I likewise was one of Captain Stearns' passenmerchants, which had been found unsaleable in China, and for which they hoped to find a better market in Jamaica. There were exbetter market in Jamaica. There were ex-cellent cabins on board the Neptune, and as the weather was fine, and we hoped for a the wind whistled mournfully; and the pain at his heart became intolerable, as he sat there, pondering over the bitter work of his best Havana cigars, conversing on the politics of Cuba, America, and Europe, and carnestly arguing about the qualities of French and Spanish wines.

It was a superb evening, and a gentle breeze, which had just sprung up, came to us laden with the perfume of a thousand tropical plants. Nearly all of us had drank deeply, perhaps rather too much. We did net begin to speak French, which every one understood tolerably well, until Senora Ar-guelles and her daughter withdrew. Senor Arguellas, as I should have before stated, was still detained in the city by some bus which he wished to complete before embarking for Jamaica.

"Do not go away, I beg of you, until I have seen you," said Senora Arguellas, rising from her seat, and addressing Capt. Stearns. "When you are at leisure, ring the bell, and a servant will inform me of it. I wish to converse with you about the arrangement of

The Captain bowed. Never, as is seemed to me, had Antonia smiled more graciously than when the ladies left us. I do not extend the Captain might lack courage to fight a duel, he was, nevertheless, a thorough seadurel, he cause or circumstance of The Captain bowed. Never, as it seemed | ploughi from that cause.

in the slave-trade, and the other replying with more animation than ill humor. In short, in the midst of this dispute, in which face. Both arose at the same time, having apparently recovered their same froid from this unfortunate incident. The Captain was

"I beg your pardon, Monsieur Dupont, said he, with a certain embarrassment; " am sorry, very sorry to have acted thus, though my conduct is not inexcusable."
"Pardon! Thousand thunders," cried his adversary, trembling with rage, and wiping his face with his handkerchief. "Pardon! Yes, a ball through your head will grant you pardon!"

And in point of fact, in accordance with the ideas then dominant in Cuban society, a duel was the only possible denouement. Lieutenant Arguellas hastened into the house

Lieutenant Arguellas hastened into the house and brought forth a case of pistols.

"Let us meet," carnestly said he, in a low tone, "in the neighboring wood."

At this moment Mr. Desmond, the eldest of the Americans, advanced toward the Captain, who had recovered his equanimity, and was standing by the table with folded arms.

"My dear sir," said he, "I am not quite a stranger to affairs of this sort, and if I can be of any use to you. Le."

"Thanks, Mr. Desmond," replied the Cap-tain, "I have no need of your services. Lieu-tenant Arguellas, you can remain here. I am no duellist, and I will not fight with M.

Dupont."

"What does he say?" cried the Lieutenant, looking wildly around him: "not fight!"

I then perceived the Anglo-Saxon blood, at this apparent proof of cowardice in a man of their race, boiling as hotly in the veins of the Americans as in my own.

"Not fight, Captain Steams!" said Mr. Desmond, with a grave, impressive air, after a moment's silence; you, whose name is in-scribed in the royal navy of Eagland! You must be joking?"

"I am perfectly sincere. I am, from prinor in a perfectly sincere. I am, from principle, opposed to duelling."

"A coward from principle!" cried Dupont, in a tone of irony and rage, at the same time shaking his fist at the Englishman.

This shameful epithet produced the effect of a scrpent's sting. The black eyes of the Captain blazed forth. He took one step to-captain blazed forth. He took one step to-ward Dupont, but of a sudden he was again master of himself.

"Well," said he, "I will even bear that. I was wrong to use violence towards you, al-though your impertinence certainly merited a lesson. Moreover, I repeat to you that I will not fight with you."

"But you shall give my friend satisfac-tion," cried Licutenant Arguellas, who was as much excited as Dupont; "otherwise I swear to you I will denounce you everywhere as a coward, not only throughout this Island, but at Jamaica?"

To this threat Captain Steams made no seply, but coolly rung the bell and told the daye to announce to Senora Arguellas that he was on the point of departure, and awaited her orders.
"This brave Englishman is going to shelter himself under the petticoats of your aunt, Alphonse!" cried Dupont, with most insultng irony.

"I almost question whether Mr. Stearns is an Englishman," said Mr. Desmond, who, as well as his two friends, began to be greatly excited; "but at any rate, as my father and my shots tell. Come now! To work resolutely with to insinuate that—"

It was a superb spectacle to see the in-Senora Arguellas entered at this moment, and the American, with difficulty, retained his anger. The lady seemed greatly asto-nished at the altered looks of those whom she had left so recently. However, at the request of the Captain, she entered the house Ten minutes later, we learned that Cap-tain Stearns had left the house, after having announced to Senora Arguellas that the Nep announced to Senora arguenas that the Nep-tune would get under way the next morning at precisely nine o'clock! At this news words of rage and anger blazed forth anew, and for the time being a duel seemed inevit-cover their former calmness and serenity. Arg However, we soon found that there was a limit to his patience. Dupont approached him and shouted in a tone loud enough to be heard by several of the sailors.

Then turning on his heel was about to withdraw, when he felt himself held back a hand of iron.

by a hand of iron.
"Listen, monaieur," said the Captain,
"personally I despise anything you can say; but I am Captain and ruler, on this ship, and-will allow no one to insult me before my crew and enfeeble my authority. and I will put you at the bottom of the hold, perhaps in irons, until we arrive at Jamaica Thus speaking, he thrust his astonished auditor violently from him, and went forward. All the passengers, white and colored, were on board, the anchor was weighed, the sails set, and in a few moments the ship was loughing the waves.

A few hours sufficed to show that although turn. than when the large left decrease or circumstance of the change; but, after some minutes, every one felt that the conversation was taking a disagreeable turn. I thought that M. Dupont was but ill pleased at the gracious expression of Antonia, as she addressed the Captain, but the bad temper which shone forth later did not appear to have arisen

there did not appear to have arisen

Every duty on board the ship was performed with as much regularity and precision as on a man-of war, and every one perceived that in case of a storm, or any species of danger, they could rely with entire confidence on the There arose a conflict of passionate words The weather, luckily, continued fine, but the the one attacking with bitter scorn the wind was light and changeable, so that notives of the English for their intervention several days after the blue mountains of Jamaica were in sight, the distance had not with more animation than ill humor. In short, in the midst of this dispute, in which both, heated by wine, scarcely knew what they did or said, M. Dupont applied a distance were in sight, the distance had not been sensibly diminished. At length a strong breeze sprang up from the northwest, and we crept up to Point Morant. We doubled they did or said, M. Dupont applied a disgraceful epithet to the Queen of England, o'clock in the morning. The voyage might and the Captain threw a glass of wine in his now be considered as ended, and the pasnow be considered as ended, and the pas-sengers looked forward with lively satisfac-tion to the pleasure of disembarking and es-caping the monotony of life aboard ship. There was an extremely disagreeable of There was an extremely disagreeable con-straint about every man's deportment. The Captain presided at the table with freezing politeness, and a conversation, if it merited that name, was in monosyllables. All, there-fore, were delighted to take their last diener on board the Neptune.

When we doubled Point Morant, all the passengers were in bed except myself and Captain Stearns, who had gone below to his cabin, and was busy examining his papers. As for me, I was too much agitated to think of sleeping, and so continued to walk the, deck with Hawkins, the first lieutenant, whose watch it was, cagerly watching the lights on the well-known shore which I had left a year before, with very slight hope of ever seeing again. As I looked, suddenly a brilliant flash lit up the surrounding darkbrilliant flash lit up the surrounding darkness, and quickly turning round I perceived a jet of flame issuing from the main hatchway, which, for some reason or other, had been left partially open. In the weak state

I was still in, the fright caused by the flame (for I instantly thought of the barrels of powder) almost paralyzed me for a moment, and I should have fallen to the deck had I not instinctively grasped the shrouds. The cry of "Fire! Fire!" the most fearful sound one can hear at sea, resounded through the ship. In spite of my agritation, I could perceive, in the midst of the confusion and disorder that at once arose, the imposing figure of the Captain towering up amidst the frightened sailors—who had sprung on deck—who, first commanding silence in his powerful voice, had ordered the hatchway to be closed.
This order being promptly executed, he darted down the forward hatch. The two This order being promptly executed, he darted down the forward hatch. The two darted down the forward hatch. The two or three minutes of his abscuce seemed to be a century to us, who were all so fully persuaded that our safety depended on his judgment, that not a look or word was exchanged till he returned. At length he reappeared, singed by the fire, and dragging after him what seemed to be a corpse. He threw his burden on the deck, and darting to where Hawkins stood, said to him, in a low tone:

"Hasten below, wake up the passengers, and bring me my pistols from the cabin. Quick, quick! the loss of a moment may imperil our lives."

Then turning to the sailors, he added, in a rapid firm tone of voice:
"You know that I never deceived you un-

"You know that I never deceived you under any circumstances, or for any motive. This brute whom you see here, the servant of Lieutenant Arguellas, has set fire with his candle to the rum which he has stolen; the entire hold is on fire, and it would be a loss of time to attempt to extinguish it."

With a cry of rage and fright, the crew rushed to the ship's boats, but stopped at the sharp, decided tone of the Captain.

"Back! not a step farther! Hear me. If there be the least disorder or precipitation, we are all lost! But with courage and resolution perhaps all on board may be saved before the fire reaches the powder. And remember," he added, receiving his pistols from Lieutenant Hawkins, and cocking them, "that I'll send a ball through the first man who dares to disobey me, and that all man who dares to disobey me, and that all my shots tell. Come now! To work resofluence exercised over the men by the imposing words and attitude of the Captain.

The panic which had seized them seemed to give place to firm resolution, and in a very few seconds the ship's launch, and the long, and the jolly boats were in the water.

water.

"Well done! bravo! We have lots of time before us! Let four of you remain here with me," (and he told their names.)

"three others leap into each of the boats, two into the barge, and pull them around to the shore side. The least precipitation will upset the boats, and we can only guard

As the young girl, more dead than alive, was on the point of descending, a jet of flame burst forth from the main hatchway with the noise of an explosion. The pas-senger uttered a cry of terror, and made a rush to reach the gangway. Dupont dashed between the sallort with the violence of a madman, and struck against Antonia with such force, that, had it not been for the Captain's exertions and great strength, she would have been precipitated over the side

"Back, wretch! Back, coward! he Captain, carried away by the imment danger of the young girl; and seized him by Look there," said he, and pointing with the butt of his pistol, he showed him seve ral white sharks, distinctly risible by th red light, a short distance from the ship.

"There!" cried he, "throw the first one into the sea that tries to pass before his

"Aye, aye, Captaia," replied the men to-

This terrible threat at once restored order. they lowered the women and children into the hoat "Away with her!" shouted the Captain.
"She can carry no men with safety."
A smothered groan was heard and under-

Stop an instant," continued he, "let Senora Arguellas descend. All right; away with you, quick!"

The second boat was filled with equal rapidity. The three Americans and the blacks, with one exception, descended.

"You have a noble heart," said Mr. Desmond, seizing the Captain's hand; "and I was a fool to—"

"Pass on," said the Captain, "this is no

"Pass on," said the Captain, "this is no time for compliments."

The order to "pull away" had just been given, when the Captain's glance happened to fall on me, who, silent from fear, stood behind him leaning against the shrouds.

"One moment," cried he, "here is a young man whose weight cannot make much difference."

ifference."

And he gently let me down into the boat,

And he gently let me down into the boat, saying in a low tone, "Gustave, reunember me to your father and mother, if I do not see them again."

There was but one boat left, which could not hold more than eight persons, and we anxiously asked each other, how, beside the two sailors, who were already in it, it could contain Lieutenant Arguellas M. Dupont, a colored man, four sailors, and the Captain. All, however, promptly descended except the last named.

"Can you carry another?" asked he, in a

"Can you carry another?" asked he, in a voice as firm as before; but I observed that his face, though full of resolution, was deadly asked.

his face, though that deadly pale.

"Since it is you, we are perfectly willing, but we are very heavily laden, and this is a dangerous neighborhood."

"Wait a moment—I cannot leave the ship

"Wait a moment—I cannot leave the ship while there is a soul on board."

He hastened forward and returned with the almost manimate body of the lieutenant's servant, which he lowered into the boat. Then hearing a dull roar close at hand, he threw the painter into the boat, and cried.

and cried:

"Now away and save yourselves!"

The men leaned to their ears, and the beat shot away. The Captain, now that all but himself were in safety, began to look attentively in the direction of the shore, shading his eyes with his hand; presently he hailed the first boat:

"They must have seen us some time ago, and the pilot boats ought to be on the way, though I don't see them yet. If you meet one tell them to hasten, and there may yet be a chance for me." and cried:

one tell them to hasten, and there may yet be a chance for me."

All this scone of anxiety and terror, which it has taken me so long to describe thus im-perfectly, from my own recollection and those of others, did not last, as I was after-wards assured by Mr. Desmond, more than eight minutes from the embarkation of Se-nora Arguellas to the departure of the last hoat.

boat.

Never shall I forget the spectacle which the ship presented wrapped in flames, the only object visible except ourselves on that dark night, on the ocean's surface, when we had left that heroic man, who, after saving us all by his courage and presence of mind, had condemned himself to an inevitable death! We had scarcely gone two hundred yards, when the flames had entirely covered the deck, and mounted the rigging and some of the sails, marking out in lines of fire the hull of the ship and its masts and yards. The Captain, in order not to lose the chance he had spoken of, had retired to the extremity of the bowsprit, after having let go the jib and staysail, and there found a temporary refuge from the flames; but to what purpose, if it was but to prolong the agonies of the death which threatened him?

The bests glided on in professed silvers.

The boats glided on in profound silence, interrupted only by the regular dip of the ears, whilst more than one gaze narrowly cars, whilst more than one gaze narrowly scanned the shore with lively anxiety, in hope of at length discovering the pilot on whom so much depended. At length a distant hail almost stopped the beatings of my heart; the sailors answered back, and a boat glided out of the dense obscurity, closely followed by another.

wed by another.
"What ship is that?" cried a man who stood in the bow of the first bont.

"The Neptune, and that is Captain Stearns on her bowsprit!" I instantly sprang up, on her bowsprit!" I instantly sprang up, and shouted at the top of my voice: "A hundred pounds to the first boat that reaches

"That's the voice and figure of young La-our," cried the pilot. "On! on! Hurrah words of rage and anger blazed forth anew, and for the time being a duel scemed inevitable between Lieutenant Arguellas and Mr.

Desmond, who seemed determined to break some one's head, to sustain the honor of the English name. However, this did not take place, and the company separated in disorder and full of bitter feeling.

The next day, at the appointed hour, we were all on board. The Captain received us with cold politeness, and I observed that the angry looks of Dupont and the heutenant did not seem to disturb him in the least. The averted looks and air of disdain of Dona Antonia as she passed to her cabin with Sessions, will upset the boats, and we can only guard one gargings.

However, the passengers were rushing on captured that there was a large quantity of powder on board. Searcely had the boats reached the ship's side, when the men, both white and black, rushed become he were they to escape from the volcano which roared beneath their heavy loads, and the smallest one was in imminent danger of swamping. What agonies of sustont sailors, whom he had selected for the purpose, pushed them roughly back.

"Back! back!" cried he, in a voice of the enterprize. A moment alie danger of the extending at the inevitable danger of the enterprize. A moment alie danger of the enterprize. A moment alies dang harbor boats. There was no one on the bowsprit of the Neptune, nothing but a rope hanging from the end. The two pilots, doubtless fearing the danger, had immediately withdrawn from the burning ship. However, our cries ceased not to encourage them. Suddenly a vast sheet of flame burst them. Suddenly a vast sheet of flame burst from she hold, and then a horrible explosion re-school through the air. I fell, or was overthrown, I don't know how, and the boat was tossed about as if suddenly drawn into a violent eddy; then came the hissing and noise of numerous bodies darted from a great height into the sea; then to this blinding flash and fearful report succeeded profound cilence, and darkness so dense that one could scarcely recognize his neighbor. This silence was broken by shouts from one of the pilot boats. We recognized the voice, and our lively exclamations showed the brave Captain how rejoiced we were at his preserva tion. Half an hour later we joyously disem-barked; and as the ship and cargo were fully insured, the only result of a disaster that had so imperiled our lives, was a tolerable heavy loss to the insurance companies.

A silver service was presented to Captain Stearns at a public dinner given in his honor at Kingston. In the speech of thanks which he made on that occasion, the Captain explained his motive for so obstinately refusing to fight a duel with M. Dupont, of which the papers had published various accounts.

Left an orphan at an early age," said he, "I was brought up with extreme tenderness by a maternal aunt, Mrs. C——," (and he cited a well-known name.) "Her husband had fallen in a duel in the second month of his marriage. My nunt continued to bear her great sorrow till I leached my nineteenth year; her grief made such a vivid impression upon me that I conceived an extreme distaste and herror for the barbarous usage which had caused it, so that it needed not the solemn promise which she exacted from me on her death-bed, to make me resolve never, under any circumstances, to accept a challenge. As for what I did at the unlucky barning of the Neptune, recalled by my friend Mr. Deamond with so much praise, I simply fulfilled my duty—he and I belong to a class of sailors who consider it the Captain's most sacred duty to be the last one to leave or abandon his ship. Moreover, I should have been the greatest of cowards to display any weakness in the presence of of that is to say under the circumstances which in that is."

THE SATURDAY EVENING POST.

Here the Captain blushed and stammered Here the Captain blushed and stammered unaccountably. Evidently he was no orator. I don't know whether his embarrassment was caused by the peculiar expression with which Sener Arguellas regarded him, or by was caused by the peculiar expression with which Senor Arguellas regarded him, or by the glance he had given at the gallery, where he observed the calm gravity of Senora Ar-guellas, and the blushes of Dona Antonia; at my rate he continued to stammer painfully, though the company kept applauding to give him time to recover himself. After a few unintelligible sentences he sat down, covered with embarrassment, but in the midst of us applause and general good humor

I have but a few words more to add. Cap tain Steams has been long since settled in Havana, and Dona Antonia has become Mrs. Stearns. Three young Stearnses have al ready made their debut, to my certain know edge, and the Captain is in a flourishing Dupont, and, in point of fact, I have not the slightest curiosity. Lieutenant Arguelias at tained the rank of major, at least I suppose must be the major whose name ! seen mentioned in the papers as slightly wounded in the Lopez affair

"And you, Monsieur Narrator," asks one of my readers, "How are you?"
"I am pretty well, I thank you!"

The only grocer in Hastings, Michithat persists in the selling of intoxica gan, that persists in the ting beverages, has fixed a sort of wheel let-tered with the initials of the liquors desired as B for brandy, W for whiskey, and so on ad infinitum. The drinker places his tum-bler upon the letter of the drink he desires -not forgetting to place the money there also—then turns the wheel. It goes behind a screen, is filled, rolls on its journey round to the drinker, and no one is seen to sell, or take pay, and thus the law is evaded.

The poet who composed these line

t have been hopping mad : A thousand girls with azure eyes, With coral lips and golden hair, Are gathering hops in Bethel, Maine A thousand girls—divinely fair.

Il day their numble fingers work, To gather in the leafy crop; And since I cannot be a Turk, Oh' how I wish I were a hop'

The following notice is posted in two "I here depose places in New Hartford; and say, that I, Judge Lyman, of Lawful age and hear Martin Wilcox tell his Boys to tone my Rooster off his Grounds, and the stoned the Noble Bird like Stephen of Old times. Even note Death and he lies in my Conquest Leap Somebody must pay the

A correspondent says, the most nu-siy news has reached me concerning the health of the Empress Charlotte. There we can made speed hor recovering her reason. The other day the inmates of the Chateau de Tervicion, where she has been living lately, were thrown into the greatest consternation ly her sudden disappearance. For a long time their is arch was in vain. At last they discovered the unfortunate Princess hidden in a distant wood close to a farm, where is approved she had effected herself as dairy mand to the farmer's wife, who had not recognized her. What a triste, terrible history where? Daughter of a King, an Emprose, new a welow, without a throne, stealing away from a princely house to become a common servant!

The Jows constitute so large and in nisi an element of San Francisco, that of hondays and vacations are coming to in governed by the Jewish holidays and fest any of his auties."

1 any of his auties."

1 any of his auties."

1 any of his auties."

2 be herself said she would prefer to remain the year with you, if you thought fit to let her.

12 A Mr. Linderman, of Indianapolis, anded in a warm bath, and was suffocated.

few days ago. w York, leaving all his property to his low, who was his second wife. One of your by his first wife has now married the wolow and the fortune, much to the disgust An action to set made the

Two counties in Ohio gave the votes recent election, and four others gave the of less than 20 for either party Melly, and sale to the Echo and his hand towards and bowed to the Letter and his hand towards and bowed to the Later.

"Allow me, Mrs. Grinshaw, 70 introduced to the future Mrs. Ewart."

"Allow me, Mrs. Grinshaw, 70 introduced to the future Mrs. Ewart."

"Allow me, Mrs. Grinshaw, 70 introduced to the future Mrs. Ewart."

"Future Mrs. Ewart."

"Allow me to offer you have sized.

"Allow me to offer you have sized."

ared ever exteen thousand lives.
It is approunced that almost all the g brokers of Wall street, during freen years, have been ruined in larger than they had at first. Some of them ave been ruined a great many times.

[So Up to October 10th, twelve shillings. on the pound had been paid to the credit of Overend, Gurney & Co., the suspended Lon-

12 A woman of respectable standing in

New London, Coun. cowhided her son in the public streets of that city the other day, because he refused to marry to suit her

MARRIED WELL.

CHAPTER XIV

THE APPOCHONDEIAC DESPONDS; TO

Of course the Grimshaws had a right to be informed of the accident which had hap pened in their garden; at least if the matter were not to be kept altogether secret, and if George Ewart intended to behave in the im-George Ewart intended to behave in the im-becile manner usually adopted by young men in his bliesful position, who drop in at all hours from the country or the clouds, just to squeeze the handikin, or to muse upon the footiet, or to refresh their memories with respect to the eyebrow of the most beautiful of women. And it is not every old hypochondriae and every dutiful old Echo who would like to have under their roof a who would like to have under their roof a young lady engaged to be married, and therefore without much time to fulfil her other engagements. It has been said that Ewart was a fellow of considerable determi-nation, and he therefore resolved to at once nation, and he therefore resolved to at once take the bull by the horns—that is to say, old Grimshaw by the button-hole (figuratively speaking, for the hypochondriae was a man with whem few ventured upon familiarities,) and his tale unfold. Accordingly, when he rose to take leave, he asked if he could speak a few words with Mr. Grimshaw alone.

Old Grimshaw led the way to his little study, closed the door behind himself and Ewart, and then said anxiously and in a low ice to the latter

Is it Bright's disease you want to speak

Not exactly," answered Ewart, laugh ing; "but nevertheless it is about a disease which is nullis medicabilis herbis." What is it, then?" asked old Grimshaw

"Plainly and briefly," answered Ewart,
"I have asked Miss Finch to marry me."
"Then you're a d—d ungrateful scoun-

"I beg your pardon for the expletive, Mr. Ewart; I forgot your cloth."

"Oh, hang the cloth and the expletive too. What do you mean, sir, by applying such terms to ne?"

such terms to n "Stay," said Grimshaw, with the air of one who sees a gleam of hope; "but did she accept you?"

"Then you are a—, I mean you are an accomteful secondrel."
"Explain yourself, sir" thundered Ewart is a tone which reached the Echo, and caused her to originate a remark, on her fore account of : Lawks' Miss Finch, whatever can they be talking about?" whilst Nelly blushed and stammered with embarrassment, and grew stanmered with embarra-sment, and grew pale, and trembled with apprehension.

"Why, you know I've been better ever since she has been here; she has been my right hand and both my eyes; she makes me stuff that I can digest; she has measure-ised the tir doulenroux almost out of me; she talks more sense and more religion than the bench of history, the makes account the bench of bishops; she makes me some-times feel quite good. When I see her figure floating about, I get very nearly active again; and when I hear the sound of her exclusive of board, of course."

"Well, sir, well!" exclaimed Ewart, impatiently; "but why am I ungrateful? and ow dare you call me scoundrel?"

"Didn't I beg of you to visit her freely? and before I've had my bargain a year—be-fore I've had a mirerable twenty paneds worth—in you step, and take her away. It's downright robbers."

gravely and confidingly.

"I'm not at all suce that I'm not, my good fellow. I am extremely serry for the terms I used-pray, forgive me. Let us shake hands, and let me tell you that, in my candid opinion, you've done a good thing

Old Grims aw returned to the Eche and Nelly, and sale to the former, as he waved gratulations, Miss Finch," continued old Grimshaw; and "gratulations, Miss Finch," came audibly from the direction of the and aftern years, have been ruined in "Though whatever we shall do without you," ejaculated the hypochondriae; and than they had at first. Some of them been ruined a great many times.

"Do october 10th, twelve shillings be equal to the emergency." Nelly received the congratulations with grateful smiles and silent content, took her candle, and retired to sleep the slowly coming but happy sleep of a maiden from whose

The same night there was dialogue be-tween the tasselled and the frilled nightcaps:
"I knew she'd marry well," grumbled the

THE former, "Well!" echoed the latte

Yes, well," snarled the former. "Don't know he has bought a living worth six hundred a year?

"Six-hundred—a year"
"Yes, he told me so; and I call that well for a girl in Miss Finch's position." In Miss Finch's position." He may have to wait some time, though;

re's that to be said. There's that to be said."
If you're not glad, for her sake, Mrs.

Grimshaw, all I can say is, I am."

I am., was repeated with some emphasis. The dialogue ceased, and soon Mrs. Grimshaw was playing her usual part of echo to her husband's masterly performance on the nasal instrument. After a day or two, Dr. Snell called, and After a day or two, hr. She'l caned, and found that the course he had determined upon adopting for stopping Mrs. Grimshaw's bilious tongue was not required. She had experienced a great revulsion of feeling upon hearing of the marriage to be; she tool quite an early-morning opportunity of show ing her interest in the affair; she kissed Nelly, and begged to be treated as a mother by her, to whom she even apologized for the burst of the day before, adding I've a dreadful temper, and he is so harsh now, and he used to be so fond;" and the poor old thing fell apon Nelly's neck and wept, and Nelly wept upon her neck. The hypochondriae, on the contrary, looked discontentedly at Nelly, shook his head at her disapprovingly, and complained at breakfast that she seemed determined to make his messes nicer than ever, that he ight be the more disconsolate when she had gone. But he got no sympathy when he complained to Dr. Snell. The doctor openly triumphed; teld the hypochondriac many plain truths on the subjects of old age and selfishness; nearly got kicked out of the house and, on descending the stairs, enountered Nelly. "Come, here, my dear," said he, leading the way to the little waiting-room. Nelly tripped, smilingly and blushingly expectant, after him. "Come here to me-closer-closer—that will do-there! take that!" and there was the peculiar sound most frequently heard when "dear" Emily embraces "dear" Laura, or when both are fondling "dear" Caroline's baby.

cried Nelly, springing back; why, you never took such a liberty be No, but I think I shall again," said the doctor, coolly: "I like it."

"I-daresay-you-do," rejoined Nelly, archly; "but that is not the only considera-Well, well," said the doctor, resignedly,

"I darcsay you will have enough of it now without my assistance. But let me tell you, Mrs. Ewart that will be hereafter, I feel as if you had done me, as well as Ewart, a personal kindness. I couldn't feel more pleased if I had brought you round from an attack

Don't talk of such horrid things, doc again; and when I hear the sound to voice, I fancy I could get up ned dance to its music. And all for twenty pounds a year all roses now; cut all but the second batch of amouncements from the first column of amouncements from the first column of the Times now. But I can't afford to forget the first and the third, and I'm expected where they attach considerable importance to the first. So, good-bye, my dear, and—I really feel inclined to say—thank you."

And, as the doctor rushed to his carriage, he nright robbers."

nright robbers."

You must be mad," began Ewart; but sent that tonic in a white choker the sent that the sent th muttered to himself: "She deserved to be

CHAPTER XV

" WOO'D, AN' MARRIED, AN' A'."

"Gallop apace, ye fiery-footed steeds," and bring in night after night until the short iny candid opinion, you've done a great time for everybody rencerned except me. Fancy living alone again with Mrs. Grimshaw. Oh, Heavens "" and he uttered his pitiful remark with such a comic wail, that Ewart fairly ended only by the substitution of a closer. with such a comic wail, that Ewart fairly conders the force of the fair tour laughing.

"Of course, she can't go just yet," said the hypochondrize insisted upon the wedding? The hypochondrize insisted upon giving the paring, etc., about 200,000 pounds.

"Well," rejoined Lwart, "the question with you pounds the fair she ought to remain with you was, who ther she ought to remain with you was, who ther she ought to remain with you was, who ther she ought to remain with you was, who ther she ought to remain with you would gladly receive her until I have everything ready at my curacy, if you would the lancoin culogy, he replied "Oh, no! When I go to see a savage put on his paint and dance a war dance, I am not surprised at any of his anties."

Well, "rejoined Lwart, "the question with you will a groan and an air which bore witness to his strong repagnance; Augusta and Caroline Platt were in the height of glory as bridemaids (though they considered Nelly had married beneath her;) Mrs. Platt wept genially in a pew, where Dr. Smell test capious smulf; the bride looked her worst ins is usual on such occasions;) the Eche sat in a pew by herself, and performed that tolerably simple duty with a groan and an air which bore witness to his strong repagnance; Augusta and Caroline Platt were in the height of glory as bridemaids (though they considered Nelly had married beneath her;) Mrs. Platt wept genially in a pew, where Dr. Smell test of glory as bridemaids (though they considered Nelly had married beneath her;) when I go to see a savage put on his paint and land to the substitution of a closer the what tour langhing.

"Of course, she can't go just yet," said the hepston drive the wedding?

The hypochondrize insisted upon giving the the hepston drive with said the way of the tremain with you would to prove the provide and the substitution of a closer the can't go just yet," said the well to said the substitution of a closer the what tour langhing.

"Well," rejoined Lwart, "the question with you would the hepston drive with s such occasions; such occasions for the rate of throwing the mystic slipper. But a single ten-line paragraph, or a seed-sentence, may haunt his mind for weeks, beg. of her to walk into his study. He closed door, and taking her affectionately by alone have made you no present."

"Oh, pray, sir." said Nelly, tearfully,
"pray, don't, don't—"
"Do you recollect, my dear," broke in the more effect upon me than I chose at the time to admit; but now, if I have judged your mature rightly. I think you will value my pri wedding-present in the shape of a tribute to your independent spirit, your sense, your love of justice, and your kind heart."

"Oh, how very good of you!" was all Nelly could say as she put her two hands in his, and held up her tearful face, as if asking for the kiss which he imprinted gravely and paternally, adding with a trembling voice: "And now, my child, farewell, and God be with you!"

The honeymoon was short, but oh, so sweet! Nelly was soon established in the curate's house as the curate's wife; and with love and labor amongst the poor, she was happy as the day was long. Happier still she had hopes of being, when less than a year had passed, and a welcome cry was heard from one who might some day call her mother; and on the very day when her first-born was laid in her arms, the old rec tor with nine toes in the grave was pro-nounced by the doctor to have the tenth in the same predicament.

There had been a great deal of laughing when, in deference to the strong recommendation of the hypochondriac (who growled, "Don't shout before you're out of the wood,") Nelly's own fortune of twenty pounds a year was settled "entirely" on her self (as the laughers sarcastically remarked;) and now it seemed more laughable still when Ewart had come into his living worth six hundred a year. Ah! he was a lucky man (said worldlings openly, and ecclesiastics to one another;) and there could now be little doubt but that Nelly had married well.

(CONCLUDED NEXT WEEK.)

23 The Professors of the University of Varzorin, Poland, have received instructions from the Czar of Russia to conduct the studies of the institution in the Russian lan-guage. As not one of the Professors is acguage. quainted with the language, having been educated as Poles, they are somewhat em-

The Cuba sugar crop is reported to promise an unusually bountiful yield, the fields of cane all over the island being very luxuriant. The grinding of the cane has egun in some places. Two men recently died suddenly at a anadian tavern, after drinking a cup of cofsuspected her of poisoning the men, protested she had not, and to prove to prove harmlessness of the coffee, drank a cup herself, when she also fell down dead. An examination of the coffee-pot showed that a bunch of matches had been boiling with the A famine in Scandinavia is among the latest misfortunes reported from Europe. Bad harvests last year caused it, and the people are asking for aid from the surrounding countries.

② G. A. H. Sala, the English author, attributes his bankruptcy to "heavy travelling expenses and insufficiency of income." A good many people fail from the latter cause. (元) A girl in Romney, New Hampshire, while bathing, sank, and remained under water thirty minutes. It was twelve hours before she showed signs of conscioueness, and two days before she was entirely con-

A Maryland man, who has arrived at the ripe old age of one hundred and two years, was married a few days since to his wife, and the couple are now on a tour. What an example to the young bridal tour.

men of this generation! Mr. Edmund Quincy, in his life of Josiah Quincy, gives the origin of the name of Point Judith, on Long Island Sound. It ap-pears that Mr. Edmund Quincy, who died over two hundred years ago, left a daughter Judith, who married John Hull. He owned " ill-reputed headland, the terror of all sea sick passengers," and conferred the name of his wife upon it. We wonder if there was any satire on his wife's temper concealed in the name. ber of a fanatical religious sect, lately killed his own son and offered him as a sacrifice to God. He stabbed the little boy of seven, several times in the stomach, and after he was dead fell on his knees in cestacy, implering God to receive the offering. After being taken to prison he resolutely refused food, and died of starvation before the sentence upon him could be executed.

TO MAKE A CANDLE BURN ALL NIGHT.—When, as in case of sickness, a dull light is wished, or when matches are mislaid, ut finely powdered salt on the candle, till reaches the black part of the wick. In this way a mild and steady light may be kept through the night by a small piece of a candle.

There is an old Oxford story about a niversity official who had attended the University sermons for forty years, and who used to thank God that he remained a Christian still.

tian still.

18 A writer in the New York Commercial Advertiser says:—'As a rule, a newspaper topic treated at length is considered superficially, a long article being seldom a deep article. We have usually found that a continued consideration of a subject resulted in the production of a much shorter article than would have been produced on the contraction. than would have been produced on the spur of the moment. The essay gained in breadth and profundity what it lost in length. A reader may skim over two columns of dif-fuse, superficial writing, and not carry away from his reading any permanent impression. But a single ten-line paragraph. arousing analogies, and suggesting ideas that ultimately materially influence his opinions."

£ The compilers of the census for 1860, hand, he said.

You will think it edd, my dear, that I in presenting a life table of the white population of the United States, express the opinion, pray, sir," said Nelly, tearfully. in this country is greater than that of any other nation, and that a person ten years of "Bo you reconcer, my dear, broke in the pochondriac," what an argument we had age may calculate upon living forty-seven years; "Oh, please, Mr. Grimshaw, do not allude such an occasion—" years, and of sixty, fifty years; of fifty, twenty-two years, and of sixty, fifteen and one-half years. Why might Theodorous be the most primitive of monarchs? Because he is King of the ABC-nians.

1 27 It is stated that the Chinese have recandle, and retired to sleep the slowly coming but happy sleep of a maiden from whose heart a load has been lifted, who has begun to taste the chief of earthly joys, who have and loves, is beloved (as she has been told.)

That," said the hypochondriac, "is my

He drew out a parchment, at which Nelly looked, and saw that old Grimshaw had once the spring-grown tea with the old and withered leaves of the previous season's two thousand pounds instead of the original one.

"That," said the hypochondriac, "is my

Advantages of Being Poor.

BY JOHN QUILL.

Probably there is not a poor manually made on the globe who don't think he would be happier if he were rich, and there are several dillogs of noverty-stricken human beings Probably there is not a poor man anywhere millions of poverty-stricken human beings who are working and worrying and cheating and lying to get rich, under the erroneous impression that they can enjoy themselves better if they live in a brown street better. better if they live in a brown-stone house, and have an incalculable number of green backs. If these discontented fellows knew the truth, they would understand that they possess advantages which the rich can't enjoy. In fact, I think a rich man ought to be pitied, and if any kind-hearted man would go round and relieve the poor wretches of their stamps, he would be a public benefac-tor. If any rich man feels distressed and wants to start a fellow on a duty of this kind, I am willing to sacrifice myself, and open out on him to any extent.

A poor man never has any taxes to pay. He can sit down and laugh the assessors to scorn, and read the big appropriations made by councils with a feeling of indescribable exhibaration, for he don't care a cent, and it makes no difference to him how much money they spend; and, this, leaving out of the question altogether his chances for the kingdom of Heaven, where he has the lead on the rich man, beside having a better chance for life. Nobody wants him to die; nobody is laying around in misery and impatience on the anxious bench, waiting for him to die, so as to absorb his funds. On the conit is to the interest of the poor man's friends to preserve his life, so that his funeral expenses won't come on them, and there will be no hack-hire to pay.

A poor man, I say, can enjoy life more. He lives in a rented house, and it needn't worry him any to see it abused, and his equanimity need not be disturbed if it burns down. He can sit down and look at the charred remains, like Marius amid the ruins of Carthage, and feel as cool as an acquaintance you've lent money to, and as collected as last year's rent; he needn't care a par-

And a poor man, he can repose in the bosom of his family and know that there is no avaricious young man prowling around after any rich daughter of his, and it is a matter of rejoicing with him that there is no occasion for him to play heavy father, and hurl a parent's curse at the unnatural child who runs away, and whom he cuts off with a shilling. He would only be too glad to have a shilling to cut anything off with, or to spend. That is his particular complaint, as a general thing.

Why, an uncle of mine had a brother-in law who was a poverty-stricken sort of a fel-low, and who was never personally acquaint-ed with a ten-dollar bill until a rich aunt left him a million, when he was so overjoyed that he drank himself into a first-class delirium tremens, and he was so much afraid rium tremens, and he was so much airsid that perhaps the old lady might still be alive in her grave that he spent every cent he had in building a monument to hold her down, and he was so distressed to find himself poor again that he went out and sat down under it to shed his tears, when it blew over on him and drove him six feet into the ground, and killed him. So that was all the good his money ever did him.

Besides, if you are poor you have no poor relations hovering around you and living on you, and if you are worried with curiosity you have a better chance than a rich man has of going to the poor-house, and seeing for yourself how our public charities are conducted. It's a blessed privilege, and it is vouchsafed to no human being who is cursed with a bank account.

A man in this situation is more to be envied than a boy who lived out in Donega, Pa., and who was reared in the lap of luxury, and whose father gave him a quarter of a dollar a week for spending money. For what did this unhappy child of fortune do, but to one this unhappy called of fortune do, but to go to a side-show in town and fall in love with the fat woman, who, so far from recip-rocating his youthful affection, told him she would melt over him if he didn't leave, and then she called the door-keeper, who put him out, and didn't give him back his money at the door. This boy, I say, behaved in this scandalous manner, and then under a plea of a blighted heart, he went home and nearly brought his father's gray hairs in sorrow to the grave, by endeavoring to cut his throat with a table leg, and blow out his brains with a brass-nozzled bellows. boy's father had been poor, the boy would not have had a quarter to visit the side-show, and his life would have been calm and Another thing; no poor man is ever worried by debt, for nobody will ever trust him, and when he does see a greenback he heartily enjoys it. Money falls on a rich man, he gets tired of it; but a poor man can drink but a poor man can drink it in with exhibitation. I used to know a man who had been in the depths of poverty so long that the rustle of a dollar bill would throw him into a spasm, but he was happy over it, and he said he didn't care. This was a very eccentric and singular-man, and he used to remark, that one advantage he he used to remark that one advantage he had was that when he died he would leave no money to any public charity, and then have it spent on something else, and have fighting over it, and let the lawyers work off about four-fifths of it.

He said he was never bothered with any-thing of this kind, and he revelled in it, and was a great deal happier than a friend of his, who no sconer made a fortune speculating in oil, and putting up tenement-houses, than he broke out all over with boils, and never happy unless he was being cupped and bled. This man was utterly wretched, and often he would go up into his silent chamber and sit down and cry like a baby because his income was so large. Some time ago, a wise philosopher pro-posed to start a society for the amelioration of the condition of the rich. Need I say that I go for the movement? Need I say that I would accept a position as president of that association, and would lend my carnest attention to impress upon the wealthy men of this community the importance of obtaining unalloyed bliss by increasing the salaries of the officers? It is hardly necessary; but in order to remove any trace of doubt in the minds of moneyed men, I would just advise them to try me.

Succotash-How the Indians Make It.

A correspondent of the Buffalo Express who has been to the annual green corn dance of the Seneca Indians, at the Tona-wanda (N. Y.) Reservation, gives the following comical description of how they make and eat "succotash."

I witnessed an hour since the process of manufacture. For the benefit of your fair readers let me give you the recipe after which it is made:

Build a frame work of green saplings and a roaring fire. Suspend from the one over the other, half-a-dozen large iron kettles, taking the trouble, for the sake of even Indian appearances, to scrape away as best you may, with fingers or shingles, the remains of last year's succotash. Half fill each pot with "squaw" corn pounded to a pulp, throw in a few quarts of all kinds of beans, and fill up with water. Allow the whole to boil until the color of the beans, the ashes blown from the fire, and the dust from the roadways render it a proper hue, and then allow it to cool. Stir in a few pounds of maple sugar, and, having furnished your guests with tin pails, give to each a gallon of the mixture. At first the process of eating consists in burying your head in the mass, but as the bottom of the pail is reached, the succotash may be poured into the hellow of the hand. That none may be reached, the succetash may be poured into the hollow of the hand. That none may be lost, fingers will be found advantageous in elearing up the remnants. Should your pap-pooses, or what among white women answer for that pleasing production, cry for some, bury their heads in the pail. It will do them good, and keep them still.

THE LONDON ANGLO-AMERICAN TIMES in a notice of the Paris Exposition says:—
"But we especially desire to call attention But we especially desire to call attention to the Cabinet Organs exposed by Messrs. Mason & Hamlin, of Boston, Massachusetts. These instruments are very superior. The tone produced is remarkable, and far surpasses all others that we have heard for its tich mellow quality. It pleases and surprises at the same time. It delights with its depth and body of sound, so much resembling the organ that if you did not see the instrument you would declare it a veritable pipe-organ. The tone of these instruments, unlike those of many other manufacturers, grows most favorably upon the ear. This firm have on exhibition several instruments of different styles; and, in our judgment, there is nothing manufactured on this side of different styles; and, in our judgment, there is nothing manufactured on this side of the water that will equal them. We have good manufacturers in Europe, it is true, and they turn out splendid organs; but none that will compare favorably with those on exhibition by Mason & Hamlin. They carry off the palm in their line of wares."

From the Saturday Courier, N. Y. City.

No MIDDLEMEN.—The Great American Tea Company, 31 and 33 Vessey street, are importing their teas direct, thus enabling them to supply their customers at retail at prices less than other wholesale dealers can afford to sell. The cargoes by the Golden State from Japan, and George Shotton from China—recent importations by this house—we know by personal trial, are of first quality. Those who delight in a good cup of tea, and of course all our lady readers do, should make their purchases at any one of the company's sales-rooms. No MIDDLEMEN. - The Great American pany's sales-rooms.

63" Mrs. Margaret Carr bought a black cat in Pittsburgh the other day for the pur-pose of taking three drops of blood from it to be administered to a grandchild suffering to be administered to a grandening surering from croup. Thereupon the old lady's neigh-bors raised a tumult charging her with witcheraft, and she was obliged to call on the authorities for protection. William Owens, Esq., her lawyer, brought twenty witnesses grade and fancy Northwest extra family: $116,12,50 for Penna and Ohio family, and $136,14 \text{ bit for fancy branch, according to quality. 200 bits of kye Flour cold from $8,756,9,25 \text{ bit.}

GRAIN—The receipts and stocks of Wheat continue light; 2000 bus common to good red sold at $2,306,20, 5000 bus prime do at $4,55, 5000 do choice at $2,586,2,69, and 1000 do California at $3,05 \text{ bits.}
Bus. Rey; 2000 has Penna sold at $1,7061,45 \text{ bits.}
Bus. Rey; 2000 has Penna sold at $1,7061,45 \text{ bits.}
Bus. Rey; 2000 has Penna sold at $1,7061,45 \text{ bits.}
Bus. Rey; 2000 has Penna sold at $1,7061,45 \text{ bits.}
Bus. Rey; 2000 has Penna sold at $1,000 has prime yellow sold at $1,4661,45. Oats; 40,000 bus sold at from 70 up to 780 \text{ bits.}
Bits. PhoV181ONS—There has been very little doing. Price commands $226,22,50 for mess; $21 for prime do, and $196,13,50 for prime. Bacon—Sales of hams at 196,24 \text{ cg. sides are taken in lots at 16,46,17 \text{ cg. and shoulders at 125,46 \text{ little doing.}
Bacon—Sales of hams at 17c, and shoulders, in salt, at 124,26 \text{ litt.}
Carl—Sales of tes and bibs at 144,64 \text{ little doing.}
Carl—Sales of tes and bibs at 144,64 \text{ little doing.}
Carl—Sales of tes and bibs at 144,64 \text{ little doing.}
Carl—Sales of the sand bibs at 144,64 \text{ little doing.}
Carl—Sales of the sand bibs at 144,64 \text{ little doing.}
Carl—Sales of the sand bibs at 144,64 \text{ little doing.}
FIUTT—Died Apples soid at 88,69 \text{ little doing.}
FIUTT—Dried Apples soid at 88,69 \text{ little doing.}
FIUTT—Dried Apples soid at 88,69 \text{ little doing.}
Paples sell at 150 \text{ little doing.}
Pap

ed there is rather more doing;

PHILADELPHIA CATTLE MARKETS.

The supply of Beef Cattle during the past week mounted to about $200 head. The prices realized tom $60.8% ets $2 lb. 250 Cows brought from $40.5% ets $2 lb. 250 Cows brought from $40.5% ets $2 lb. 4200 head were disposed of trom $65.5% $2 lb. 4200 Hogs sold at from $2.50 to $1.50 $2 lb0 fbs.

DENNINGTON INSTITUTE, -25d year be-

Rates of Advertising.

Thirty cents a line for the first insertion. Twenty cents for each additional insertion. Payment is required in advance.

CLOTHING,

Market Sts.,

in OAK HALL

Note.—This is the largest Clothing House in the city, and so well organized, that it has no superior in the United States. Reasonable Prices, First Class Workmanship, and Reliability, are the features of the house. Orders by mail have special care. Samples sent when desired.

The Author of the country.

Note of the problem in this country than negroes, and other interests than those relating to the freedmen, it will be well for the negroes themselves, for the Republican party, and for the country.

The Author wishes the above and the work itself to be read and pondered by all thoughtful men, in the light of the recent elections. Is not his Prediction coming true.*

The work will be forwarded by mail (postage prepaid on the receipt of the price, 50 cents, by the publishers.

J. R. LHPPINCOTT & CO.

By 13 4f No. 715 Market St., Philadelphia.

Author of the country.

The Author wishes the above and the work itself to be read and pondered by all thoughtful men, in the light of the recent elections. Is not his Prediction coming true.

The work will be forwarded by mail (postage prepaid on the receipt of the price, 50 cents, by the publishers.

J. R. LHPPINCOTT & CO.

By 13 4f No. 715 Market St., Philadelphia.

AGENTS WANTED.

The Book for the Million. "THE BOYS IN BLUE; or, HEROES OF THE RANK AND FILE." By Mrs. A. H. Hook, of the United States Sanitary Commission—the Florence Nightingate of America—comprising a thrilling record of a woman's three year' experience in Camp, Hospital and Battle Field, in her philanthropic mission of alleviating the sufferings of the Grand Arnay of the Republic. It is not a History of the War, or of any Campaign or General, but a full and gallant record of the sacrifice and sufferings of the Hank and File, who by their heroism conquered for us a glorious and honorable peace.

E. B. TIKAT & CO., Publishers, oc28-3t

A TTENTION!— MANUFACTURERS AND ALL WANTING FARMS!—Cheap Farm and Fruit Lands, Village lots, Water Powers for manu-facturing, for sale at Bricksburg, Ocean Co., New Jersey, 44 miles from New York, on railroad to Phi-ladelphia.

ladelphia.

Soft fine loam, superior for all crops. Country just rolling enough for beauty and utility. Climate mild and proverbially healthy. Water soft and pure. No fewer and ague. Sold only to actual settlers, on easy terms. Price per are $25 and upward. For circulars and maps, address ROBT. CAMPBELL, President, No. 153 Broadway, New York. V. S. HOLT, Agent, Bricksburg.

THE PIANO BOOK

WHICH CANNOT BE EXCELLED

RICHARDSON'S NEW METHOD.

Regular Sale, -30,000 a Year.

Sold by all Music dealers. Price, $2.75. Sent, post-paid. OLIVER DITSON & CO., Publishers, 277 Washington Street, Boston.

CHARLES H. DITSON & CO., 711 Broadway, New York.

THE MARKETS.

TH

AGENTS WANTED.

THE COMPLETE HERBALIST; Or, THE PEOPLE THER OWN PHYSICIANS BY THE USE OF HERBAL REMEDIES, is the title of one of the best family medical books that has ever been offered to the public. The rapid sale of this book, and the large commission allowed, enables a good agent to make easily from $30 to $30 per day. Address for full particulars the suthor and publisher, Dr. O.
PHELPS BROWN, No. 19 Grand Street, Jerkey
City, N. J. oct 26-21

EVERY MAN HIS OWN PRINTER.

TRUE, BUT STRANGE.—Any person sending as their address, with 20 cents, will receive, by mail, the Name and a Carte de Visite of their future Wife or Husband. REEVES & CO., 78 Nassau octivau St., New York.

2. TO $5.—For every hour's service, pleasant
St. and honorable employment without risk. Desirable for all haldes, ministers, teachers, suddress, reducts, or Hair force Whiskers on the smoothest face, or Hair force which was a standard for the smoothest face, or Hair force whiskers on the smoothest face, or Hair force which was a standard for the smoothest face, or Hair force which was a standard for the smoothest face, or Hair force which was a standard force or Hair force whi

UNIVERSAL SUFFRAGE

FEMALE SUFFRAGE.

BY A REPUBLICAN (not a "Radical.")

This is a lamo, containing its pages, and is devoted to a calm and moderate discussion of the Suffrage Question—the author contending that the Suffrage should be Qualified, and not Universal.

Reasons are given against Universal Negro Suffrage, and also against Female Suffrage.

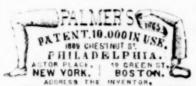

This work (published in June) was written before the Connecticut election of last Spring—and in it the writer gives the following

WARNING TO THE PARTY OF PROGRESS. WARNING TO THE FARTY OF PROGRESS.

"In every great movement, as History warns ue, it is all-insportant that the party of Progress should know schere to stop. Generally, missed by realote, they will not pause at the proper period, and thus create a Reaction, whose waves in turn sweep away not only the proofs of their tolly, but much which has really been gained for the great cause of human improvement. A safe rule in such cases would seem to be, that the reformatory party should pame when the result which they had originally aimed at was attained.

"The Anti-slavery movement has effected its conpained then the result which they had originally aimed at wear attained,

"The Anti-slavery movement has effected its contemplated end; and the work planned in the days of robe-greason being accomplished, it is now planning into madness and folly. I warn the triends of the negro, and the negroes themselves, against the inevisable reaction which they are providing. If they fail into the spirit of the Jacobins, and yield themselves to wild theories of the fatural rights of man, and wild notions of vengeance against the Southern rebels, they will experience the fate of the Jacobins, and yield own amid the flerce surges of a popular reaction. If they act, however, like moderate and sensible men, who are able to understand that there are other people in this country than negroes, and

G. FRANK. PALMER.LL.D. PRES! A. A.LIMB.C.

These inventions stand approved as the "best" by the most eminent Scientific and Surgical Societies of the world, the Inventor having been honored with the award of FIFTY GOLD AND SILVER MEDALS (or "First Prizes"), including the GREAT MEDALS of the WORLD'S EXHIBITIONS IN LONDON AND NEW YORK: also the most Honorary Report of the great SOCIETY OF SURGEON OF PARIS, giving his Patents place above the ENGLISH and FRENCH.

Churches, Pactories, Academies, Steamhoata, Plantations, Locomotives, &c.
Wade of Pure Beil Metal,

FULLY WARRANTED.

FOR CIRCLIANS ADDRESS. JONES & CO., Trey, N. Y

$1. NEW DISCOVERY. $1.

$3000. $1. Call and examine an invention needed by everybody. No experience necessary. Business light. Situation permanent—employment immediate. C. L. VAN ALLEN, 48 New Street, New octiv-time of the control of the co

AGENTS Wanted. $10 made from needed by everybody. No experience necessary, Business light. Situation permanent—employment immediate. C. L. VAN ALLEN, 48 New Street, New octi2-2m SECRETSISE RETSI—A wonderfulstrange of Book, containing 30s pages with 350 strange secrets. Reaches the whole art of Ventriloquium, Spirit Rappings, and how by burning certain chemicals, to cause rain, thunder and lightning, and all the wond of spirits, and how by burning certain chemicals, to cause rain, thunder and lightning, and all the wond of reful tricks performed by all the wonderful show, men of all countries. Sent by mail, posture paid, for $1, or $1 or $2, Address M. A. JAGGERS, Calloca, and Mental Sential and Calloca and Jacobs to the order of the Great American. The Company.

SECRETSISE RETSI—A wonderfulstrange of the Lapress of the Lapress of the Stablishment, or copy and the surface of the Stablishment of cause the salverties themselves as branches and do not make the surface and surfac

(Established 1861.)

THE

GREAT AMERICAN

Tea Company

HAVE JUST RECEIVED

TWO FULL CARGOES

FINEST NEW CROP TEAS,

22,000 HALF CHESTS by ship Golden State, 12,000 HALF CHESTS by ship Secree Shellon.

In addition to these large eargoes of flinck and Japan Fees, the Company are constantly receiving large in voices of the fixest quality of Green Fees from the Moyans districted Chies, which are unrivalled for fineness and delicacy of flavor.

To give our readers an idea of the profits which have been made in the Fee Trade, we will start with the American Houses, leaving out of the account entirely to meet the wants of First Class and most Fashion-the grofits of the Chinese factors.

of 1,000 to 2,000 packages, at an average profit of about in per cent.

Fifth: The Speculator sells it to the Wholesiae Tea Dealer in lines, at a profit of it to the per cent.

Nighth: The Wholesiae Tea Dealer sells it to the Wholesiae teroner in tota to sait instrade, at a profit of about 10 per cent.

Neccash: The Wholesiae Grocer sells it to the Retail Dealer, at a profit of 15 to 25 per cent.

Kighth: The Ketalier sells it to the Consumer, for ALL THE PROFIT HE CAN GET.

When you have added to these EIGHT profits as many brokerages, cartages, storages, cooperages, and waste, and add the original cost of the Tea, it will be percouved what the consumer has to pay, And now we waste, and add the original cost of the Tea, it will be perceived what the consumer has to pay. And now we propose to show why we can sell so very much lower than other dealers.

We propose to do away with all these various profits and bookerages, cactages, storages, cooperages and waste, with the exception of a small commission paid for purchasing to our correspondents in China and Japan, one cartage, and a small profit to ourselves—which, on our large sales, will amply an unour large sales, will amply pay us.

Hy our system of supplying clubs throughout the

These inventions stand approved as the "best" by he most eminent Scientific and Surgical Societies of the world, the inventor having been honored with MEDALS or "First Prizes", Including the GIKAT MEDALS or "First Prizes", Medal

GROUND COFFEE, 200., 200., 300., best 400 per b. Hotels, Saisons, Boarding house accepters, and Families who use large quantities of Coffee, and geometrize in that article by using our FRENCH BREAK.
FAST and DINNER COFFEE, which we see in at the low price of 200, per pound, and warrant to give perfect satisfactions.

GREAT AMERICAN TEA CO.,

Nos. 31 and 33 VESEY STREET.

CLUB ORDER.

Edwards St. Lawrence Co. N. Y.,

The LOWE PRINTING PRESSES are the best and cheapest portable Card and Job Presses ever invented. Price of an Office with Press. 415, $20, $20. Send for a circular to the LOWE PRESS (CO. 23 Water St., Boston.

WANTED--
To make an arrangement with a live man in every county who arrangement with a live man in every county who arrangement with a live man in every county who arrangement with a live man in every county who arrangement with a live man in every county who arrangement with a live man in every county who arrangement with a live man in every county who arrangement with a live man in every county who arrangement with a live man in every county who arrangement with a live man in every county who arrangement with a live man in every county who are the large statisfaction. As long a say on send us size and garden for a live and of the saints of the subscribes who are the subscribes who are the subscribes and in the county in the subscribes. As a further evidence that the subscribes were satisfied for many case of the subscribes who are the subscribes who are the subscribes. As a further evidence that the subscribes were satisfied for many case of the subscribes who are the subscribes who are the subscribes. As a further evidence that the subscribes were satisfied to a further evidence that the subscribes are subscribed for many case of Teach and the subscribes are subscribed for many case of Teach and the subscribes are subscribed for many case of Teach and the subscribes are subscribed for many case of Teach and the subscribes are subscribed for many case of Teach and th made.

nov2 3t No. 23 Cortland St., New York.

THE BOWEN MICROSCOPE.

Magnifying 500 times, mailed for 50 Cenrs. Three for $1.00.

Address F. P. BOWEN, dell's Box 220, Boston, Mass.

Magnifying 500 times, mailed for 50 Cenrs. Three for $1.00.

Magnifying 500 times, mailed for 50 Cenrs. Three for $1.00.

Magnifying 500 times, mailed for 50 Cenrs. Three for $1.00.

Magnifying 500 times, mailed for 50 Cenrs. Three for $1.00.

Magnifying 500 times, mailed for 50 Cenrs. Three for $1.00.

Magnifying 500 times, mailed for 50 Cenrs. Three for $1.00.

Magnifying 500 times, mailed for 50 Cenrs. Three for $1.00.

Magnifying 500 times, mailed for 50 Cenrs. Three for $1.00.

Magnifying 500 times, mailed for 50 Cenrs. Three for $1.00.

Magnifying 500 times, mailed for 50 Cenrs. Three for $1.00.

Magnifying 500 times, mailed for 50 Cenrs. Three for $1.00.

Magnifying 500 times, mailed for 50 Cenrs. Three for $1.00.

Magnifying 500 times, mailed for 50 Cenrs. Three for $1.00.

Magnifying 500 times, mailed for 50 Cenrs. Three for $1.00.

Magnifying 500 times, mailed for 50 Cenrs. Three for $1.00.

Magnifying 500 times, mailed for 50 Cenrs. Three for $1.00.

Magnifying 500 times, mailed for 50 Cenrs. Three for $1.00.

Magnifying 500 times, mailed for 50 Cenrs. Three for $1.00.

Magnifying 500 times, mailed for 50 Cenrs. Three for $1.00.

Magnifying 500 times, mailed for 50 Cenrs. Three for $1.00.

Magnifying 500 times, mailed for 50 Cenrs. Three for $1.00.

Magnifying 500 times, mailed for 50 Cenrs. Three for $1.00.

Magnifying 500 times, mailed for 50 Cenrs. Three for $1.00.

Magnifying 500 times, mailed for 50 Cenrs. Three for $1.00.

Magnifying 500 times, mailed for 50 Cenrs. Three for $1.00.

Magnifying 500 times, mailed for 50 Cenrs. Three for $1.00.

Magnifying 500 times, mailed for 50 Cenrs. Three for $1.00.

Magnifying 500 times, mailed for 50 Cenrs. Three for $1.00.

Magnifying 500 times, mailed for 50 Cenrs. Three for $1.00.

Magnifying 500 times, mailed for 50 Cenrs. Three for $1.00.

Magnifying 500 times, mailed for 5

R. DOLLARD, CHESTNUT ST., PREMIER ARTISTE

HAIR. Inventor of the celebrated GOSSAMER VENTI-LATING WIG and ELASTIC BAND TOUPACES, instructions to enable Ladies and Gentlemen to measure their own beads with accuracy.

For Wigs, Inches.

No. 1.—The round of the head.

2.—From forchead over the head to neck.

2.—From car to ear over the top.

4.—From car to ear round the forchead.

4.—Over the crown of the head.

4.—Over the crown of the head.

He has always ready for sale a splandid stock of Gents' Wigs, Toupeen, Ladies' Wigs, Half Wigs, Frizote, Braide, Curle, &c., beautifully manufac-tured, and as cheep as any establishment in the Union. Letters from any part of the world will re-ceive attention.

shie Fronts of the Chinese factors.

First: The American House in China or Japan makes large profits on their saiss or shipments—and some of the richest retired merchants in the couptry lave made their induces factories through their Houses in China.

Second: The Banker makes large profits upon the foreign exchange used in the purchase of Tea.

Third: The Importer makes a profit of 30 to 50 per cent, in many cases.

Faurth: On its arrival here it is soid by the cargo, and the Parchaer sells it to the Speculator in invoices of 1,000 to 2,000 packages, at an average profit of about 10 per cent. able Trade, and embrace an assortment replete with Ladies', Misses', and Children's Hoop Skirts, both plain and Gore Trails, which for symmetry of style, finish, ightness, clasticity, durability and cheapness, are much superior to any other Single or Double Spring Skirt in the American market. Every lady should try them, as we warrant satisfaction. Wholesale and Retail at Manufactory and Salesreom, No. 628 ARCH St. Catalogue corrected monthly of Sizes, Styles, and Prices at Retail sent to any address.

1002-11.

TEN DOLLARS. $10. SEWING MACHINE. $10.

$35 to $50 A DAY TO AGENTS.

PATENTED 1850. Territorial rights given free to good Agents. It is the largest, best, and strongest cheap machine sold. It makes a seam which will not rip, though a synthesis to the strong Machine sold that will sew heavy beaver cloth. Sent free by express on receipt of price, $10, packed in a wooden box with i spool machine silk, I silver hemmer, I screw-driver, and I brass gauge. Agents wanted everywhere.

For further information, apply to JOHN C. ALLEN, Ticket Agent, 901 Cheetnut St SAMUEL R. WALLACE, Treket Agent, at the SAMUEL B. Depot.

The Pennsylvania Railroad Co. will not assume any risk for Baggage, except for Wearing Apparel, and limit their responsibility to One Hundred Definers in value. All Baggage exceeding that amount in value, will be at the risk of the owner, unless taker by special contract.

EDWARD H. WILLIAMS

PRINCE & COS. AUTOMATIC ORGANS AND MELODEONS. Forty thou sand are now in use BUFFALO, N.Y. CHICAGO, ILL.

E MPLOYMENT! - 110 A DAY AND EX The penses PAID, Circulars free, O. T. GAREY, octas-free

Biddeford, Me.

WIT AND HUMOR.

How He Had Him.

A man named Wells kept a tavers in one of our Western villages, but though his house had a very good name, it was more than he had himself; for it was surmised by his neighbor that he had himself; for it was surmised by his neighbors that he used a great deal of folder, corn, etc., for which he never gave en-equivalent, though it had never been clearly proved upon him. Early one morning he was met by an acquaintance, named Wilkes, as he was driving before him a heifer, which he had most probably borrowed from some farmer. farmer. "Halloo, Wells! where did you get the heifer?" cried Wilkes.

"Bought her of Colonel Stevens," was the unhesitating reply.

"What did you pay for her?"

"Twenty dollars," said Wells, as he hur-

About an hour afterwards, as Wilkes was sitting in Wells's bar-room, Colonel Stevensentered. After a few minutes' conversation, Wilkes said-

A fine animal that you sold Wells?"
I don't understand you; I never sold Wells any animal.

Wells any animal."
"Didn't you? Why, I met him this morning with a heifer, which he said he bought of you for twenty dollars."
"He did, ch? Well, since he said so, he has got to pay me for her," said Stevens.
Wells entered soon after, and Stevens, stepping up to him, said—"Cone, Wells, I'll trouble you for the money for that heifer, it was a cash barrain.

money for that helfer; it was a cash bargain,

"I never bought any helfer from you " "Don't you remember you bought one of me for twenty dollars? Here's Wilkes can

"No, he can't," said Wells.
"You told me so this morning," said Wilkes.

A curious expression passed over Wells's face; he felt himself cornered; he had either to tell where he got the animal, or lose twenty dollars, and thinking it not safe for him to do the first, he pulled out his wallet, counting out the money, and handing it to

Stevens, saying—
"Se I did—so I did, I had forgotten all about it; you must excuse me

No Stamp on 1t.

A good joke came off quite recently at a court house. A person living a short distance out of the village is in the habit of frequently coming into town and drinking to inciria-tion. At such seasons he sees his honor, Judge M —— Beccatly, he made one of his visite, became decidedly tipsy, called upon Judge and desired the Judge to write him a His honor wrote the pledge, desired, and the tipsy individual affixed his name thereto. He then desired to have the pledge that he might take it home and ex-hibit it to his wife. His honor thought he himself was the proper custodian of the important agreement, but yielded to the solicitations of the man, at the same time assur-ing him that if he broke the contract, and appeared before him again in a state of in-toxication, he would have him locked up. A toxication, he would have him locked up. A week clapsed and the Judge was confronted by the same man, as tipey as aforetimes. "How is this?" said his honor, "did I not tell you I would have you locked up if you did not keep your agreement?" "Judge M.—," said the tipsy fellow, "do you think I am a fool? I know what I am about. I'll show you if I am a fool?" and he drew forth his wallet from his pocket, took out his pledge, unfedded its worn creases, and holding it up triumphantly, excianmed, "Will

Revenue stamp on that agreement?

Judge caved.

ing it up triumphantly, excianmed, "Will you just show me the United States Internal wears age, will receilect the hat store of Col. Messinger. (Lather of the present alderman, covered the present alderman, easier than those yoked in our ordinary way. It is related that two of his apprentices. Sol and Ben, one summer, coveted the fruit of Colonel Realistance is beautiful pear-trees, in the next enclosure, which was surrounded by a very high fence. Ben says to Sol. "I have had a good deal of practice in should like a few of those nice pears; how can we get them?" "Easy enough," says says Sol. "Tetch me your fielding over the colorer is surrounded by a very high fence of the present adderman, easier than those yoked in our ordinary way.

I have had a good deal of practice in working oxen. In 1853 I was lumbering on the Pacific coast, one hundred and fifty should like a few of those nice pears; how can we get them?" "Easy enough," says says Sol. "Hetch me your fielding over the contrainer to the harbor of Spanish and American cattle, drawing logs.

Sol. "Jetch me was uncertained with liquid manure, covered the birds and the bacon; add some small onions, little sausages, a bunch of herbs, sait, pepper, and some mushrooms; is said that when applied to lawns, white clover is sure to spring up in the greatest abundance and luxuriance where it had no examine the head of the commission expected with liquid manure, covered the fruit of the present adderman, easier than those yoke did nour ordinary way.

We find a very different opinion expressed in a communication to the Western Euralist. The writer says:

"I have had a good deal of practice in working oxen. In 1853 I was lumbering on the practice in said that when applied to lawns, white clover is sure to spring up in the greatest abundance and luxuriance where it had never been seen before.—Dr. J. S. Hough to he had on the present adderman, easier than those yoke did to the ordinary way.

The writer says:

"I have had a good deal of practice in working oxen. In 1853 I was lumbering on the greatest abundance and luxuriance where it had no hearth. Pour o drop the fruit in, the robbery was completed. Colonel Roulstone saw the whole transaction, but the boys were not aware of it. The next day the Colonel's little girl called on Ben, and asked him to lend her papa the pole that he had used to seal his pears with Ben of course appealed to Sol, who answered, "I think we had better let him have it." When the new machine was returned, it gave so much satisfaction that the little girl said, "Pa sends his compliments, and wants said, "Ea sends his completed, and the old, fence removed, I was surprised at the quantity of land we had When the new machine was returned, it gave so much satisfaction that the little girl said, "Pa sends his compliments, and wants to know if you will please to lend him your pole next year after you have done steeling on a visit to some relatives a little more po-lished than himself, was requested, on going to bed, to be careful to extinguish the candle; he was obliged to ask the meaning of the word, when he was told it was to put it when he was sitting at home in his cabin with his wife, enjoying his praties and buttermilk, on the pig uncoremoniously walking in, he said (proud of his bit of learning)— "Judy, dear, will you extinguish the pig?"

Arrah, then, Pat, honey, what do you he?" inquired Judy. mane?" inquired Judy.
"Mussha, then, you ignorant cratur," replied Pat, "it manes put him out, to be PREVARICATION .- Jack N., a Simon Pure found it extremely difficult to extract the whole truth from him, his ingenuity and ig-norance combined enabling him to evade the question. At last the lawyer, losing patience, exclaimed, Why, Mr., do you prevaricate so much? Jack, supposing he referred to his peculiar manner of utterance, convulsed the court and audience by replying indig-nantly, "How can a feller help prevarioa-ting, when he has lost three of his front teeth?"

SA SA SA SA

"James, you've put no sugar in Monarch's bread and milk to-day! You see, he can't touch it!

fortune to live there. Among these relations there chanced to be a young swain who had seen Kate on a previous occasion, and seeing, fell deeply in love with her. He called at the house on the evening of her arrival, and she met him on the piazza, where she was length be stammered out:

How's your mother?

"How's your mother?"
"Quite well, thank you."
Another silence on the part of Josh, during which Kaie and her friends did the best they could to relieve the monotony. After waiting about fifteen minutes for him to earning broke the silence by—
"How's your father?" which was answered much after the same fashion as the first one, and then followed another silence like the other.

"How's your father?" which was answered much after the same fashion as the first one, and then followed another silence like the other.

"How's your father?" which was answered much after the same fashion as the first one, and then followed another silence like the other.

"How's your father?" which was answered much after the same fashion as the first one, and then followed another silence like the other

"How's your father and mother?" again put in the bashful lover.
"Quite well, both of them." This was followed by an exchange of glauces and a suppressed smile.

This lasted some ten minutes more, during which Josh was fidgeting in his seat and stroking his Sunday hat. But at length another question can

"How's your parents?"
This produced an explosion that made the AGRICULTURAL.

Working Oven by the Head.

can we get them?" "Easy enough," says Sol; "fetch me your fishing-pole" The Spanish and American cattle, drawing logs to the mill and lumber to the landing. We had several men who claimed that the beaver-skins, together with a small bag to drop the fruit in, the robbery was completed. Colonel Roulstone saw the whole transaction, the dots log, which, after repeated trials.

An Out-Door Cellar.

It is very unwise to store a large quantity of vegetables in the cellar of a farm-house, even if it is of safficient capacity. In the latter part of the winter there will be some Yankee, was recently examined in an im-portant case in a Western court. Counsel to health than living over a mass of decaying vegetable matter. But few cellars are large enough to hold the products of the farm that requires winter storage. As we devote more ttention to the ecor the necessity of good root cellars will be felt lar however, can be made in any place Cousin Kate was a sweet, wide-awake beauty of about seventeen, and she took it into her head to go down on Long Island to see some relations of hers who had the misfortune to live there. Among these relations up. If rough stones are to be had, they are best for the walls; if not, posts and planks will answer. A strong ridge pole is neces-sary, which must be supported by posts. Bank up she sides with earth, and plank the enjoying the evening air in company with two or three of her friends.

The poor fellow was so bashful that he could not find his tongue for some time. At An casy entrance should be made at the foot by digging down the carth in a gradual An easy entrance should be made at the front by digging down the earth in a gradual slope; and as this part will be exposed to the like granite, hard blue stones, very difficult to break and pulverize, has a peculiar value. The grinding of such rocks or stones under the iron-rimmed wheels of wagons, the wear of horse shoes, and the mixture of this ground rock with the manure scattered along the roads—produces a compound which is found to be highly acceptable to trees and plants. The granite rock, we know, is rich in potash and shicia; but it is not those ele-ments alone which give this road sand its peculiar value. By the process of grinding peculiar value. By the process of granding and triturating inert substances, such as oyster-shells, charcoal, quicksilver, we develope medicinal and other virtues which these substances do not possess in their crude form. And so it is supposed to be with road sand. By the constant grinding and states of the iron beauty of the constant of the constant grinding and states of the iron beauty of the constant grinding and triturating of the iron-bound wheels and horses' shoes, the comminuted granite be Everybody who remembers Boston thirty years ago, will recollect the hat store of Col.

Some time since we published a statement of a teamster who said that ozen yoked by the head would do more work and do it post heap and saturated with liquid manure, said, "Pa sends his compliments, and wants to know if you will please to lend him your pole next year after you have done stelling his pears?"

"In no case would the people use the stick, afterwe had broken their cattle to our yoke. Ask one of them the reason, and the reply would be that the stick was no good. I broke sixteen yoke in the winter of 1834, and could have had thrice as many, if I could have had thrice as many, if I could rail fence, with stones, weeds, rubbish, &c., and the carrier of the ward, when he was told it was to put it they cannot take advantage of a heavy load; they cannot turn their heads in either way; the flies, and there are many other disadvan-tages. I amentisfied the yoke and bows are far superior to the Spanish way, and how lost, but it is, in the majority of cases, a nurany sane man can recommend such an outlandish mode of working oxen is more than I can comprehend.

E. R. M."

sery of weeds, and, in ploughing, much time is lost in turning, and the headlands and corners are seldom properly cultivated. corners are seldom properly cultivated.

Items.

The Prairie Farmer says that one pint of strained honey mixed with two gallons of water, will make excellent vinegar, after

It is reported that an agricultural society. somewhere in the state of New York, offers larger premiums for butter and cheese than it does for horse-racing. Doubtful.

A new grass is springing up in the southern ates. It appears to be a dwarf clover, is very thick set, covering the earth with a beautiful carpet of green. It is much relishmore seriously. Carrots, beets, parsnips, cabbage, and the like, require cellar room. A sandy hillside is the best place for making a cellar, as in this situation good drainage is secured, as well as easy access. A good celWeevils in Granaries.

Some years since, accident discovered to a French farmer a very simple and efficient method of preventing, or rather destroy-ing this insiduous pest in corn and grain

Happening to deposit, in one corner of a building in which there was stored a quan-tity of grain, a few sheep skins from which the wool had not been pulled, he found, upon examining them a few days after, that they were literally covered with dead weevils. experiment was repeated, and always

On stirring the corn, (wheat, probably,) he was surprised to find that although pre-vious infested to a degree that forbid all hope of saving it from immediate destruc-tion by this pertinacious foe, not a single in-sect was to be found among it. The ex-periment is certainly worth trying. Instead of the sheep skins, which are quite valu-able, we might substitute those of the wood-chuck who is increasing. chuck, who is increasing to an inconvenient and expensive extent. What killed the weevils, whether the fatty matter on the skin, or something else, we have not been able to learn. At any rate, let us try the weekleds in the skin of the skin of the skin or something else, we have not been able to learn. At any rate, let us try the woodchuck skins.

A USEFUL HINT, -A subscriber writes as follows:—"A tin tube made like a syphon, driven into the vent of a barrel of wine, or cider, and the other end inserted into a vial of water, will prevent the air from entering the barrel, while the gas escapes through the water. Make the barrel otherwise tight. When the cider or wine in the barrel is done working, the water in the bottle will cease bubbling. It requires no filling up, and there is no loss. I have tried it." We will only add that it can be made by any tin plate worker, and when once made can always be kept for future use.

RECEIPTS.

SQUIRREL Sour.—Cut up two young squirrels, and put them in a pot with five quarts of cold water. Season with salt and pepper. Let them boil until the meat is very well done, and remove it from the liquor, and cut it up into small pieces. Put in the soup a quarter of a pound of butter mixed with a little flour, and a pint of cream. Throw in the cut meat, and just before you serve it add the beaten yolks of two eggs and a little parsley. Chicken soup is nice made in the same way, with the addition of a pint of green corn cut from the cob, and put in when it is half done.

OYSTER SOUP.—Strain the liquor from two quarts of oysters, add to it an equal quantity of water. Put it on to boil, and skim it. Then throw in a little white pep-per, a head of celery cut in small pieces, and a third of a pound of butter with two tea-spoonsfuls of flour rubbed in it. Boil it five a pint of cream, and after one more boil peur into the tureen, in which have some toasted bread cut in dice, and a little finely-cut parsley.

PERDREAUX EN PAPILLOTES. — Divide two brace of partridges down the backs; toss them in batter until they are three parts done; take them up; put into the butter four shallots, a few parsley leaves, and mushrooms, all chopped up; toss these; dredge them with flour; moisten them with white wine; add salt and pepper, and reduce all together until it forms a kind of forcement; lay some of this upon the partridges; sur-round each bird with very thin slices of bacon fat, and envelope them in sheets of but-tered paper; grill them upon a clear, but ot fierce fire, and when done serve in the

PEEDREAUX A LA CHIPOLATA. - Cat up a brace, or leash, of partridges; add to them some small bits of fat bacon, and toss both for a minute or two in butter; take them up, dredge flour into the pan; let it brown; dilute it with equal parts of white wine and gravy; replace the birds and the bacon; add the sugar; stir it well in, and simmer two hours slowly, then boil it quickly, for haif the skins be disliked, then the juice is not to be taken out (as described above,) but after the first process the fruit is to be pulped through a very coarse sieve with the juice. and managed as above. Some of the stones All the juice may be left in and boiled till it evaporates, but do not add the sugar till it has done so. It looks well in shapes for dessert.

ANOTHER.—{lbs. of sugarto 1 lb. damsons. Put the fruit on the fire with a very little water to soften it; then pass it through a sieve when all juice and pulp are separated from the stones and skins, The pulp and near must boil till quite thick.

FLAVOR FOR SOUP.—Try celery seed for flavoring soup. The concentration of flavor in celery and cress seed is such, that half a drachm of it fluely pounded, or double the countil if you want to the countil it for the countil it is not considered. quantity if not ground or powdered, will impregnate half a gallon of soup with almost as much relish as two or three heads of the This valuable acquisition fresh vegetable soup kettle deserves to be universally CEMENT FOR BOTTLES.-Equal parts of rosin and brick-dust pounded fine, and some beeswax, stewed together. Or, melted pitch and rosin, and dip in cold water after sealing Or, equal parts of rosin and Spanish brown and half the quantity of beeswax; melt all together.

The Hon. Galusha Grow said in one speeches during the Pennsylvania elec-nivass: "It has been said by an old tion canvass: writer: 'Let me write the songs of a nation and I care not who makes their laws. say to you, let me appoint your judges, and I care not who frame your laws!"—[And said in a voice of persuasive entrenty, "One say, let us write the editorials of the American people, and we will at the same time make the laws.—Ed. Sn. Eve. Post.]

looking fellow approached the carriage, and said in a voice of persuasive entrenty, "One sixpence, my lord—only one little sixpence, and it will treat all your friends in Ireland!"—Blackwood's Magazine for September.

THE RIDDLER,

Enigma.

WRITTEN FOR THE SATURDAY EVENING POST

I am composed of 32 letters.

I am composed of 32 letters.

My 2, 24, 20, 16, 29, is a very useful animal.

My 20, 14, 7, is a kind of grain.

My 9, 26, 12, 12, 31, 19, is a girl's name.

My 1, 21, 10, 26, 23, 22, is a vegetable.

My 11, 18, 15, 8, is one of the United States.

My 4, 5, 20, 26, 31, 12, is a county in Ohio.

My 14, 3, 26, 20, is a division of time.

My 25, 27, 15, 12, 17, is a river in Georgia.

My 9, 28, 14, 13, 17, 17, 13, 6, 15, 28, 32, 18, is a town in North Carolina.

My 30, 31, 5, 4, 15, 12, is a musical instrument.

My whole is a Bible saying. H. K. D. Havana, Ohio.

WRITTEN FOR THE SATURDAY EVENING POST.

A city in Spain.

A tree. The name of one of Miss Mulock's hero-

A color.
A king of the Jews.
My whole is a noted lecturer. LESLIE.

Double Rebus,

An adverb of time. Where coals come from

A tree or a foreign fruit.
A useful article, essential to our comfort.

A measure A large river.

A denial. The initials form the name of a great general, and the finals a battle at which he fought.

IVY GREEN.

Problem.

WRITTEN FOR THE SATURDAY EVENING POST.

A, B, and C, can build a house in 20 days; B, C, and D, in 24 days; C, D, and A, in 30 days; and A, B, and D, in 36 days. They all commence the job together—but after 10 days A ceased working, 2 days afterward B ceased, and at the end of the 18th day C ceased also. In what time would D facility ceased also. In what time would D finish the job? WM. H. MORROW.

Irwin Station, Pa.

An answer is requested.

Problem.

WRITTEN FOR THE SATURDAY EVENING POST. The fore and hind wheels of a carriage are 4 and 5 feet in height respectively; the hubs are 8 feet from centre to centre, sighting over the tops of the wheels what is the variation from the horizon, the carriage standing on level ground?

JOSEPH S. PHEBUS.

Nebraska City, Nebraska.

Puzzle.

WRITTEN FOR THE SATURDAY EVENING POST.

I wish to plant an orchard of nine straight ows, and five trees in each row; and the orchard is to contain only nineteen trees, Richmond, Ky. J. W. C.

An answer is requested.

Conundrums.

What is the difference between a hungry man and a glutton? Ans. -One longs to eat, and the other eats too long.

Why is fire paradoxical? Ans.—Because the more its coaled the hotter it gets. Why is ambition like a weathercock?

Ans.—Because it is a vain and glittering thing to a-spire. "Can a musician execute a piece of music before he gets the hang of it?" "Yes and to every two pounds of fruit weigh half of kings,) a gross, rude, ignorant man, but a pound of sugar. Set the fruit over the fire in the pan, let it boil quickly till it begins to look dry, then take out the stones and add his own, both to hold and leave behind him. Now, this man had a certain slave, his nephew, who bore with his black looks, his biting words, his cruel caprices as long as Jacob toiled for Leah, expecting to get Rachel. Seven years of bondage, and at the end of them this reward—Sir Plutus, shaking his own fat sides with mocking laughter, made him the confidant of his approaching marriage. The wretched young man, driven by these tidings to despair, and writhing un-der the immediate lash of his uncle's scorn, determined—like some criminal condemned to die upon the morrow, who sups en prince -to enjoy himself for one brief quarter of an hour, come what might. So he told Sir Plutus what he thought of him, without softening a single adjective, or picking out deli-cate synonyms for his nouns. Heliogabalus (for the baronet was a great eater,) always accustomed to dainty dishes, and a total stranger to plain food of this sort, literally choked with indignation, fell into a fit upon the spot, and died. Sir Scattercash (the nephew, and one of the last occupants, by the-by, of the King's Bench Prison) used always to speak of this incident (which gave him ten thousand a year,) with pathetic re-gret: "I might have saved myself seven years of slavery—for my uncle was always of that full habit—by telling the truth at

> A LIMITED CIRCLE. - When the celebrated Lord Castlereagh was stopping once to change horses at some very poverty-stricken post-station in Ireland, his carriage was surrounded by beggars who implored him in all the eager accents of native entreaty for a charity. Taking no notice of their appeals, he sat cold and unmoved until the horses were ready to very whom a very miserable were ready to start, when a very miserable looking fellow approached the carriage, and said in a voice of persuasive entreaty, "One